A TIME TO CHAT isn't easy to find for seniors Mike Maddison and Mike Forsythe, but they discuss what's new at school in the few minutes before a pep assembly.

People 28-65

A SEA OF FACES reflect the unity of the student body at ACHS as they gather to cheer the Demons onto victory at a pep assembly.

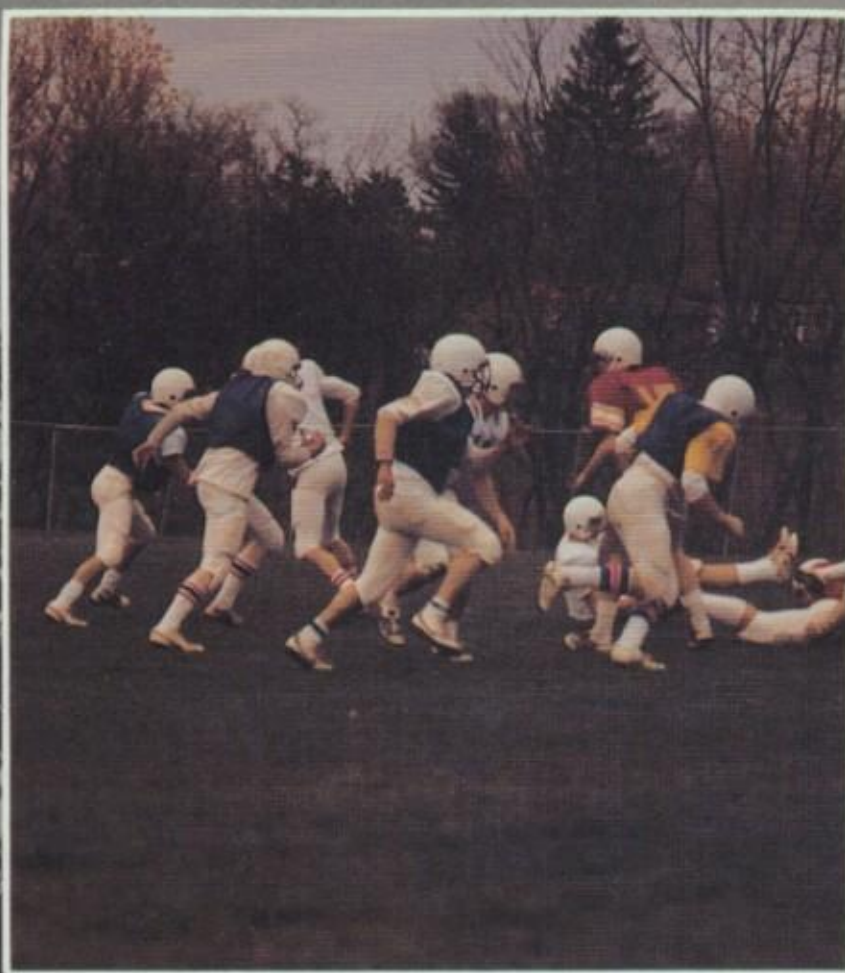

spectrum (spek' trem) n.

1. the series of colored bands in the rainbow
2. an after-image
3. a continuous range or entire extent

At School 66-103

THE BEAT OF AN ACHS DRUMMER keeps the marching band in step as they represent the best the school can offer in instruction.

Sports 103-131

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT for Demon football players and the rest of the Albia sports teams as they give everything they have to every challenge.

Community 132-152

ALBIA'S BEHIND YOU is Mayor Bernard Carr's message at the homecoming assembly when Principal Al Leber provides him with a hat for the occasion.

Rainbows are

Rainbows

Pearl Blaine

When rain drops from heaven's blue
And sunshine low obstructs the view,
A rainbow forming in the sky,
A colored spectrum meets the eye.

The breaking splashing raindrops fall
In prisms to reflect it all,
They intermingle with the sun . . .
A perfect rainbow has begun.

"PLEASE DONT'T FAIL ME NOW" thinks Greg Brock in physics lab as he pours sand into the bucket to see how much weight the homemade bridge will hold.

Opening

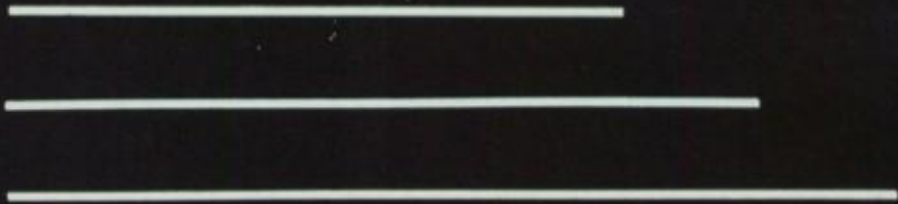

"ROUND AND ROUND" was one of five selections of the marching band at the state marching contest in Newton where band members picked their own spot on the field.

Promises

It spreads across the graying sky
When stormy rains have just passed by,
The red, the white and violet hue
Span the earth in promise true.

It's nature's way of painting skies,
That we may see a vision rise
To fade away from whence it came,
The power of sunshine and the rain.

Rainbows so rare I hope we see
The colors clear can't really be
Just a mirage of rain and sun
But promises of things to come.

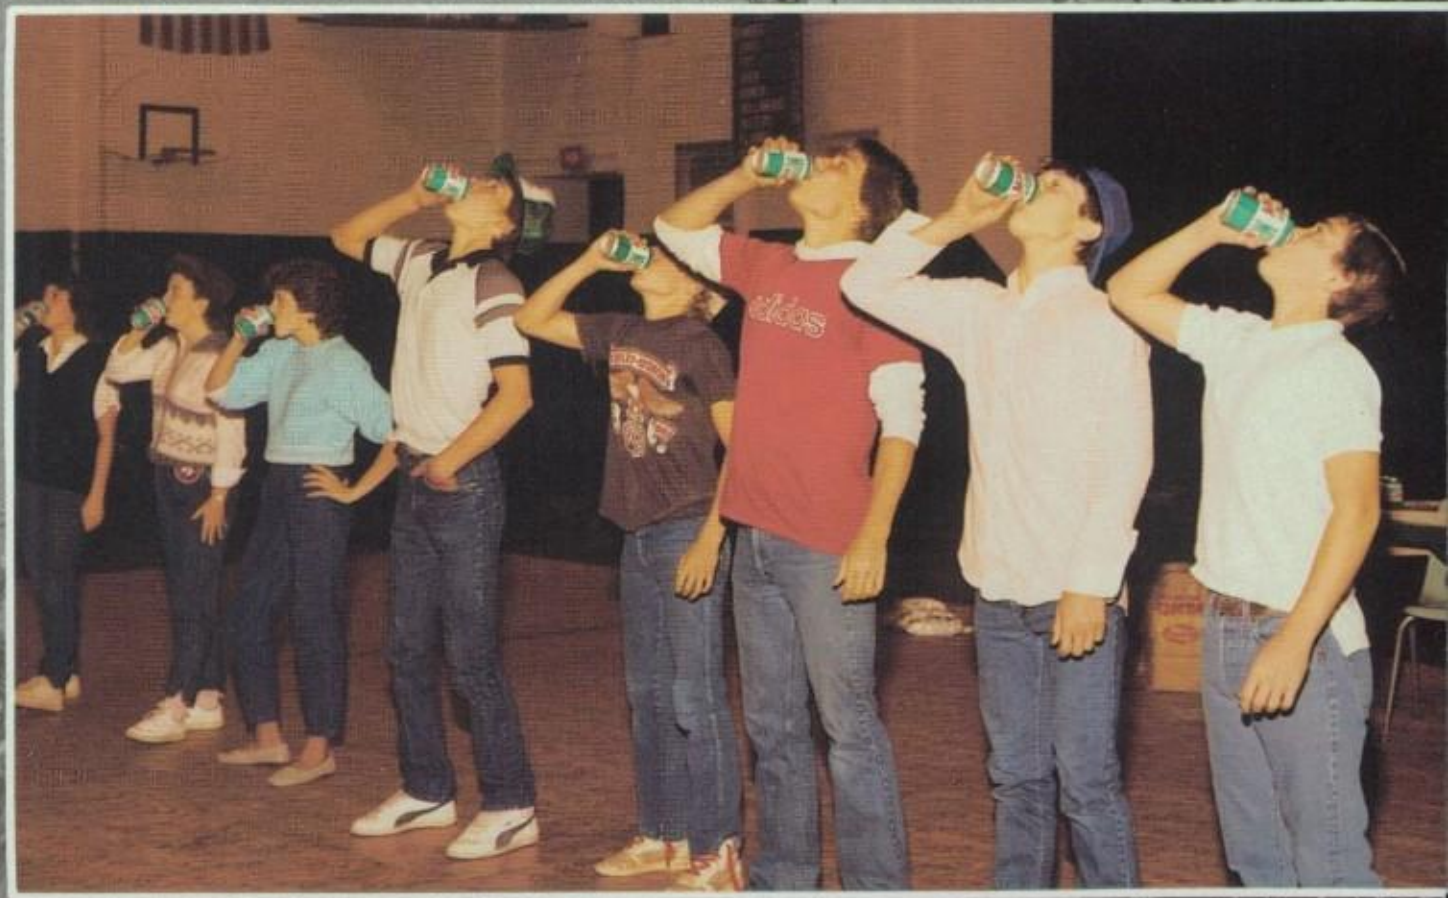

AT WORK AGAIN are student council members Marla Main, Kris Woollums and Billy Carter as they make some extra money for the student body by painting the outside trim of the high school building.

"I DO," says Katie Nolan as she marries Bob Burkman in the mock ceremony held in family living classes. A reception was held following the service.

"WE'RE #1," yells sophomore Angie Billings and other cheerleaders not only at the homecoming pep rally on the square but various assemblies throughout the year.

GIVE ME A DEW. Thirsty students chug a Dew during the finals at homecoming assembly with first prize quart of Mountain Dew as a reward.

Student Life

IN FINE VOICE, pops choir members carry on the tradition of song for such performances throughout the year as the Christmas concert, concerts around town and various competitive events.

DRESSES, FLOWERS AND COUPLE SIGNS are a few things that make proms a cherished memory.

Changing some, keeping others. Tradition seemed to be a big part of Homecoming '85.

Every year in mid-October, students wear funny hats, stuff chicken wire until their fingers are sore and root for the home team just to show a little school spirit.

Homecoming '85 was no exception, but a few traditions were challenged and a few maintained amid the week of fun and games.

"Fun and games" is exactly what kicked off the week's festivities with a new aspect introduced by student council on Monday, Oct. 7. An hour-long assembly was attended by the student body and Mayor Bernard Carr who encouraged students to enjoy the week.

Students participated in some unique games including a pop-chugging contest with senior Tim Buol and junior Lisa Smith declared as champions. A tie between senior attendants Chris Shroyer and Michelle Bunch and freshman attendants Mary Kay Burkman and Billy Carter was called in the royal toilet paper roll-up. Sophomore Terry Braun won the marshmallow eating contest, and David Spurgin, a senior, won the jello-slurping contest.

Another break from tradition, planned but never held due to a steady downpour was a mud volleyball match between the junior and senior girls. Visions of mud-drenched faces excited the eager observers, but weather throughout homecoming week dampened their enthusiasm. Instead, a poorly attended volleyball game was held inside Thursday night, but the annual bonfire burned brightly following the game.

The rain continued through Friday's parade and game against Oskaloosa. In fact, the weather was so threatening the traditional ride around the field honoring the king and queen was cancelled and the bouquet of roses was given to Queen Sherry Hollinrake during Friday's afternoon assembly.

One tradition that was maintained was the wearing of long velvet dresses by the homecoming princesses although the possibility of prom-like dresses was suggested. Of course, as is the custom, the 1976 king and queen, Jerry Fitzsimmons and Kim Baker Haluska, crowned the current royal couple in front of students, faculty and proud parents.

Float building met with some difficulties. Although students have traditionally been known to sneak in some "late night" work on floats after lights out, the junior class was technically disqualified when discovered breaking competition rules.

Then on Thursday evening, some senior class members carried things a bit farther and gave their float a "preview" showing around the square. That act prompted a new rule—no parading before parade time.

Finally, the traditional live band at Saturday's dance was replaced with video entertainment to either watch or dance to. "I thought it was neat. I liked it," said senior Sonja Swee.

O M I N g

"THIS IS FOR THE BIRDS," says senior Marla Coady as she stuffs chicken wire into the frame of the '86 class float.

REPLACING LIVE ENTERTAINMENT was a video dance sponsored by student council. Sandra Kellogg, her mother, Rhonda Hohneke and Kim Hoover dance the night away to Phil Collins' "Don't lose my number."

READY FOR THE FIELD, seniors Mike Lawrence and Jay Leshen prepare a young recruit for future games when they, along with team members Jonas Anderson, Jim Bates, John Jamieson, and Noland Johnson, demonstrate equipment to approximately 20 youngsters at Albia's Daycare and Pre-School.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE BOYS. Coach John Casebolt and Doug Tuetken, along with football captains Norm Stocker and Jeff Van Polen, do an outstanding job of keeping the crowd's attention at the Friday pep rally on Albia's square.

ALIVE AND KICKING. The Albia guidons and high school marching band follow the lead of Cheri Whitson as they parade down South Second Street.

THE ROYAL RED AND BLUE. The 1985 homecoming royalty includes sophomore attendants Bill Belzer and Michelle Freshwater; juniors Eric Berry and Steph Sinnott; Queen Sherry Hollinrake; King Mark Scieszinski; senior attendants, Michelle Bunch and Chris Shroyer; and freshmen attendants, Mary Kay Burkman and Billy Carter.

Rainy weather may have affected some of the week's activities during homecoming, but nothing dampened school spirits during the "make 'em sweat" day, chug a-lug contest or Friday's parade.

Playing on a rain-soaked field Saturday, Oct. 13, however didn't do much for Demon power as Oskaloosa defeated the Blue Demons 9-3.

The 1976 King Jerry Fitzsimmons and Queen Kim Baker Haluska returned to crown Albia's homecoming couple Mark Sciescinski and Sherry Hollinrake. They were attended by freshmen Billy Carter and Mary Kay Burkman along with sophomore attendants Bill Belzer and Michelle Freshwater.

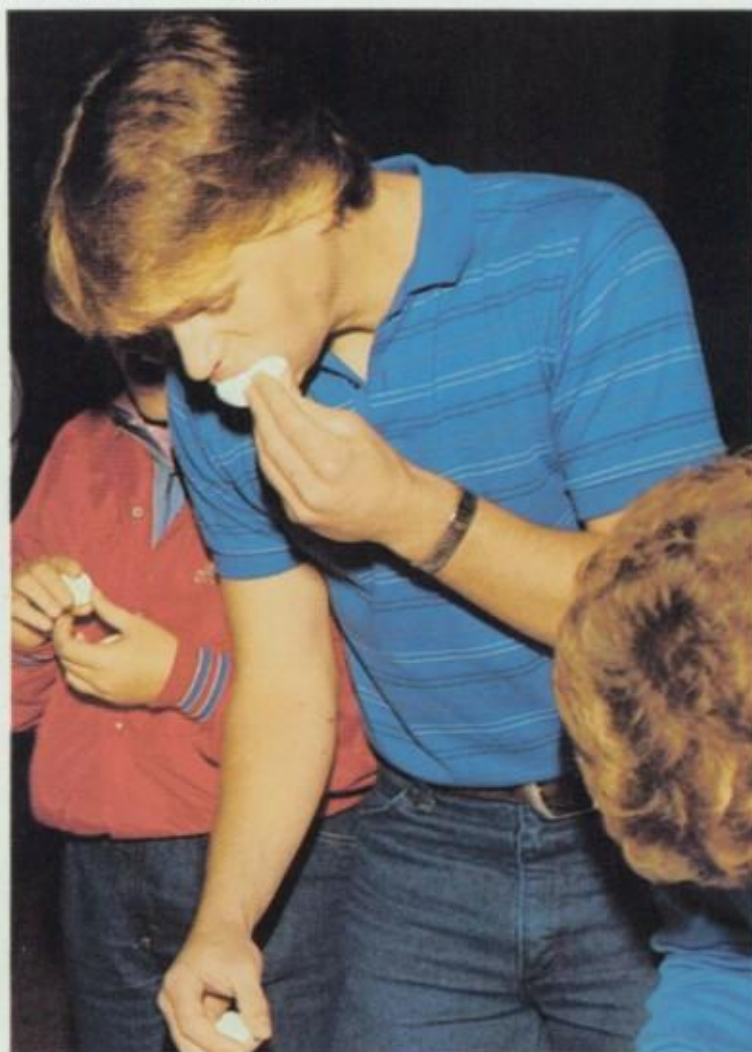

Eric Berry, an exchange student from Mexico, and Stephanie Sinnott represented the juniors along with senior attendants Chris Shroyer and Michelle Bunch.

For the second consecutive year, the class of 1988 won the float building contest with the theme "The Fall of the Indians." Second place went to the freshmen.

SWEATING IT OUT. American literature teacher Marlene Sprouse and junior Susan Mordan discuss writing techniques during a writing conference held on "Make 'em Sweat Day."

THE FALL OF THE INDIANS was the theme of the winning class float built by the class of 1988 for their second consecutive win.

STUFF IT. Sophomore Terry Braun inhales several marshmallows during the marshmallow eating contest at Monday's assembly to place first.

Moveable set highlights

"WHAT IF YOUR MOTHER and father don't approve of me?" asks Claude Hopper(Fred Zelhart), as Betty Bright (Andrea Cardenzana) tries to persuade him to meet her parents.

After 28 rehearsals and three Saturdays spent on constructing a moveable set, the 12 cast members of "No Opera at the Op'ry House Tonight" presented the Tim Kelly melodrama on Nov. 15 and 16.

The moveable set, used due to the amount of scene changes, made changes quicker and easier, according to second-year veteran Fred Zelhart. After last year's production of "Little Women," the students wanted to produce a more light-hearted play. A melodrama was also chosen because it required less light changes, and the lightboard had been malfunctioning.

The play takes place in Desert Rat, a small town in the Arizona territory, where a poor composer, Billy Bright, seeks to sell his opera. He meets and falls in love with Alma Pumpernickle, the prima donna of the Salmi Opera Company whose aunt, Madam Violetta, runs the production.

A second pair of lovers, Betty Bright and Claude Hopper, who also work for Madam Violetta, meet and fall in love during the play.

The villains of the play, Lily Liverspot and Baron von Wolfpack, devise a plan to swindle Alma out of the fortune she is going to inherit.

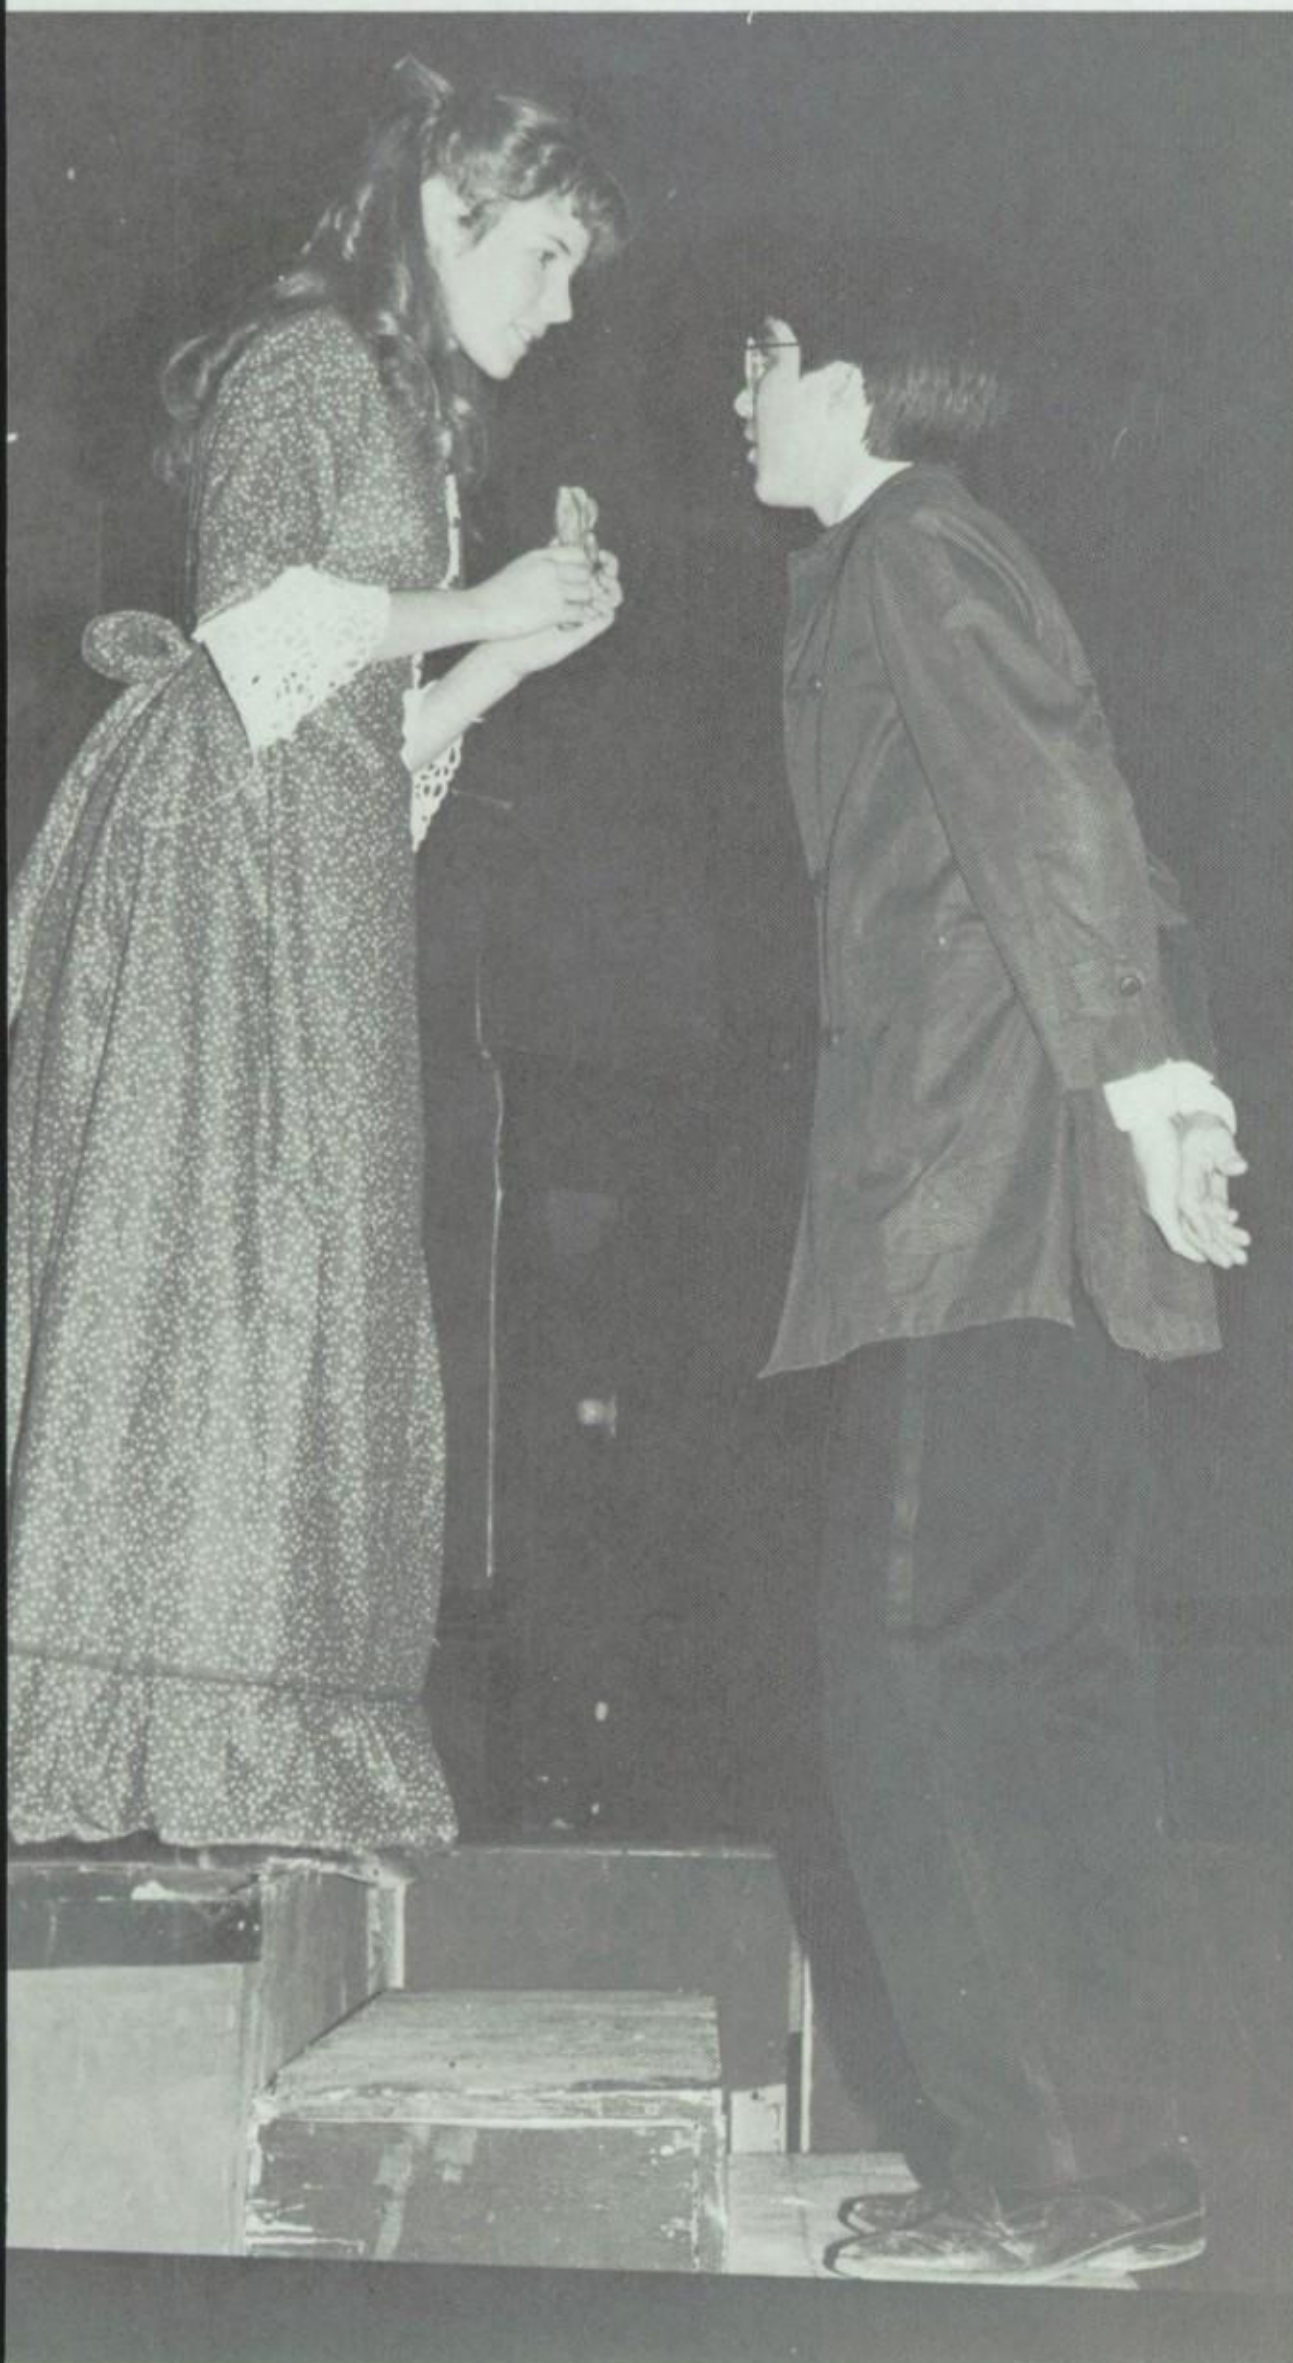

Along with those characters, Big Gulch, the town's "servant of the law," Cindy Lou, Cap'n Alkali, the Indian and the woman in the shawl added their contributions to this old-fashioned melodrama.

Although the actors are the ones seen by the audience, there's a lot more to plays than just acting, said drama director Matthew Foster. For any play to be successful, it must have large amounts of people involved in constructing the set, costumes, makeup and lighting.

STRIKING THE SET is one of many jobs for drama club members. Junior Shelia Behrens and sophomore Julie Gansman and Fred Zelhart tear down set construction a few weeks after the November performance.

TRYING TO WIN Alma's (Julie Gansman) heart, Billy Bright (Curt Rhine) gives her a rose while whispering, "This rose is as sweet as your heart."

DEFIANTLY LOOKING SKYWARD, Lily Liver-spot (Shelia Behrens) craftily devises a plan to swindle Alma Pumpernickle (Julie Gansman) out of her fortune.

WOLFGANG VON WOLFPACK (John Hogeland) presents a bouquet of flowers to Alma's aunt as part of his master-minded scheme to marry Alma and get her fortune.

What's the best time of year at ACHS? In the fall during homecoming, football season and Thanksgiving? How about springtime's promise of graduation, prom and baseball?

For many, the holiday season is the most magical time of year. School lockers, bulletin boards and classrooms all take on a festive look some time between Oct. 30 and Dec. 25.

In fact you never can be sure who will roam the halls between these two dates.

A masked bag lady may come "trick or treatin'" before Halloween with the trick on us, a mischievous gremlin may be spirited away or 'old Saint Nick himself could drop in just to check his list.

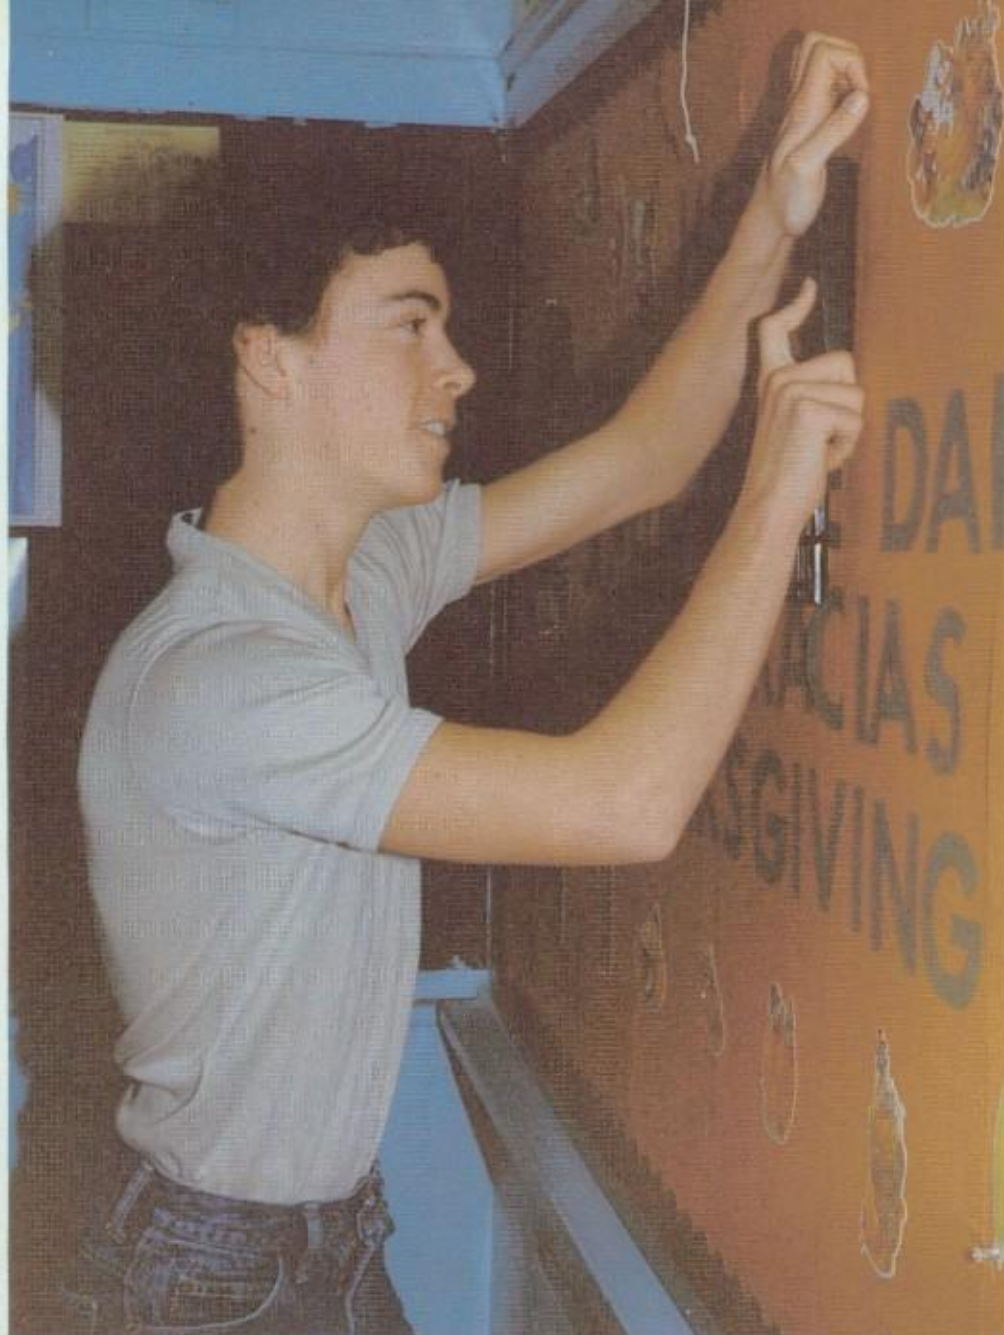

But ACHS'ers were busy as well. Art club members spent countless hours preparing for a Christmas bazaar in November and earned approximately $1,000 in profits. Publications staffers held their annual Kathryn Beich candy sales before Halloween to deliver the $4 tins before the holidays.

Fruit sales was the FFA holiday project and band sold Christmas wreaths. Many organizations had parties to celebrate the coming of the holidays, and student council provided a tree and entertainment on the last day of school before vacation.

Holidays may come around only once a year at ACHS, but students and faculty make the most of them. In fact between Halloween and Christmas, coming to school is almost fun!

FELIZ DIA DE GRACIAS is the Thanksgiving message junior John Hogeland posts in the foreign language room.

STRUGGLING INTO HER GREMLIN costume, sophomore Terri Kasper prepares to thrill the other FHA ghoulies at the club's Halloween party, Oct. 29 where she won the prize for best overall costume.

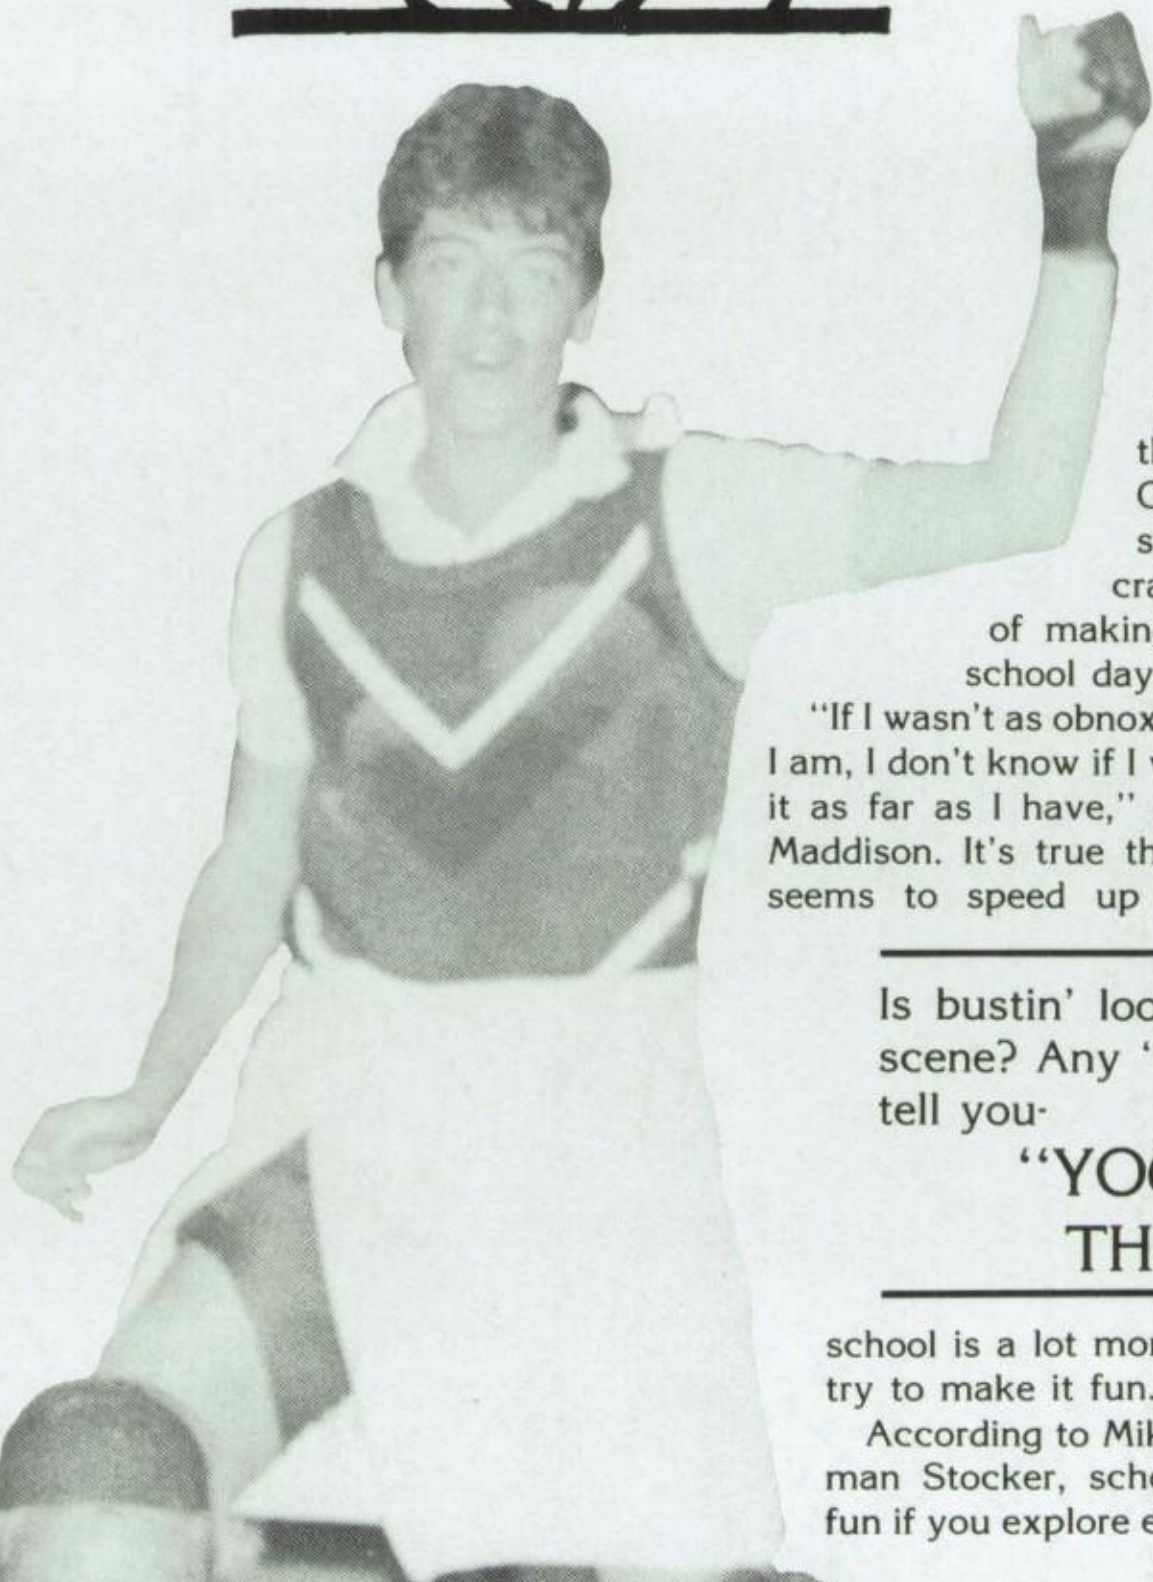

WINTER FUN for ice-busters Liz Brewer and Tim Buol who had an unexpected vacation when classes were dismissed early due to freezing rain.

ALTHOUGH NOT THE IDEAL prom date for instructor Graham Quinn, substitute secretary Patti Stuchel made a foxy bag lady when she visited ACHS classes just before Halloween.

WHEN IS CHRISTMAS CELEBRATED on Nov. 9? For art club members Brenda Arnold, Gina Smith, and Julie Dicks, Christmas came early as they hurried to brush on last-minute strokes to finish their ceramic objects for the club's fundraiser.

BUSTIN'

One doesn't have to go to ACHS too long to discover that a lot of crazy things go on here. Of course, for some students craziness is a way of making it through the school day.

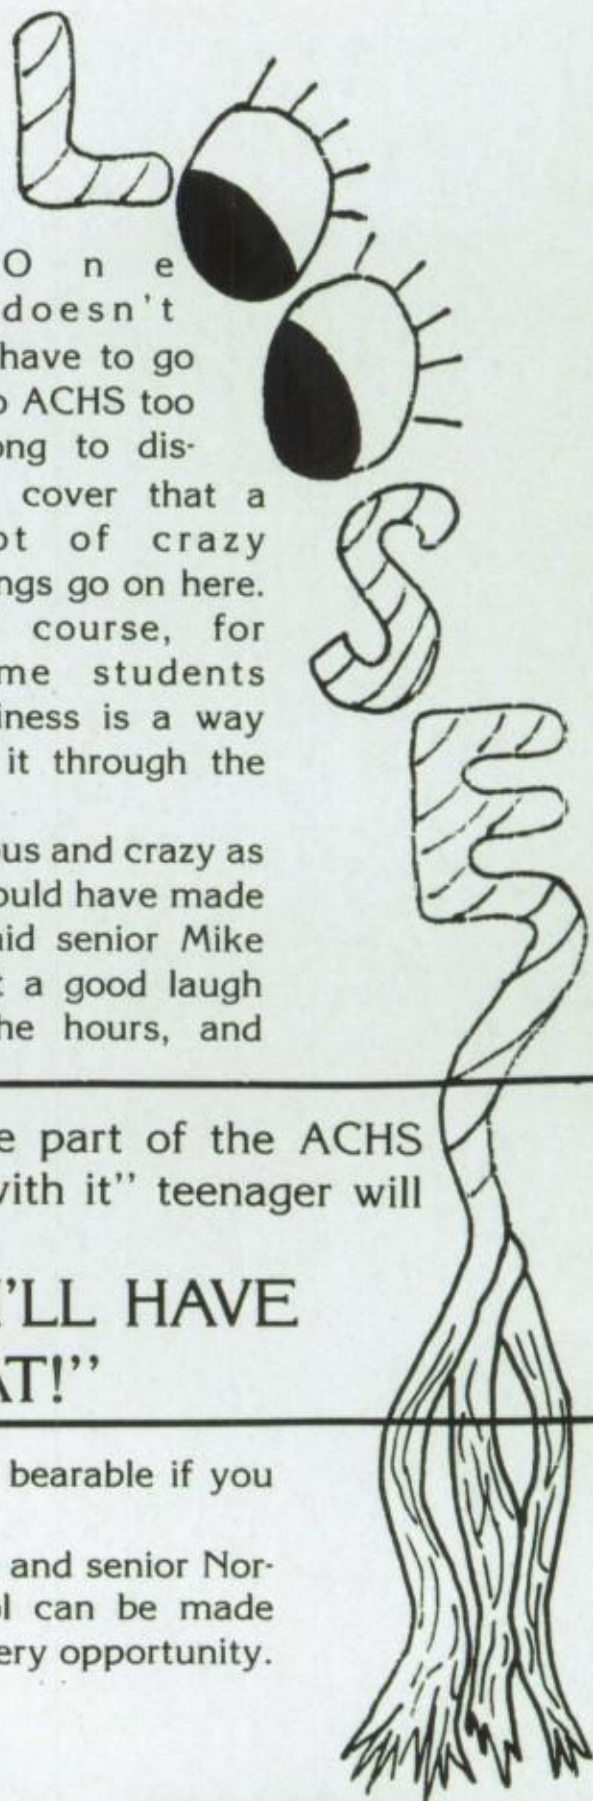

"If I wasn't as obnoxious and crazy as I am, I don't know if I would have made it as far as I have," said senior Mike Maddison. It's true that a good laugh seems to speed up the hours, and

Is bustin' loose part of the ACHS scene? Any "with it" teenager will tell you-

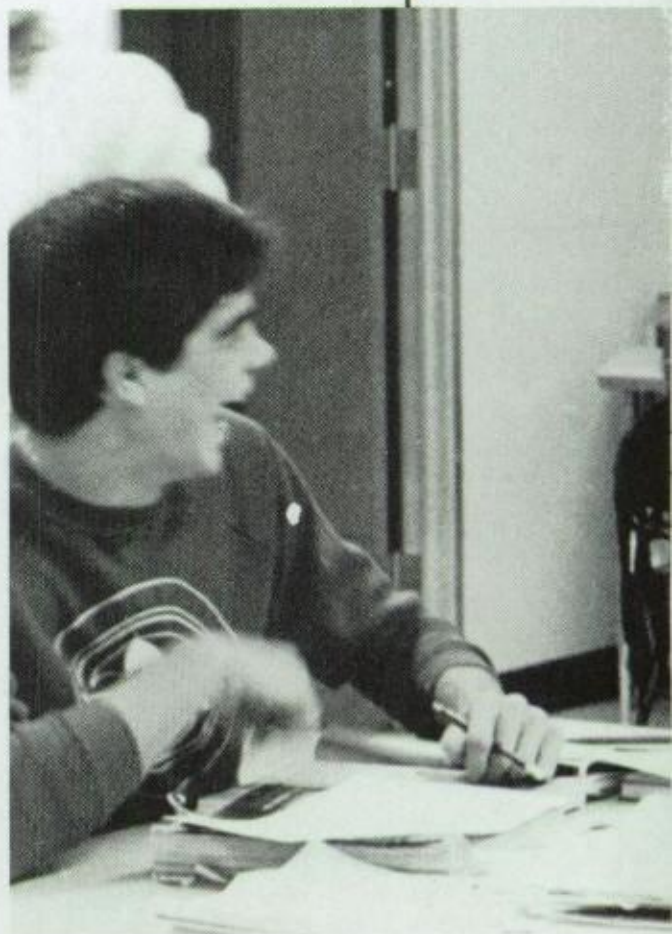

"YOU'LL HAVE THAT!"

school is a lot more bearable if you try to make it fun.

According to Mike and senior Norman Stocker, school can be made fun if you explore every opportunity.

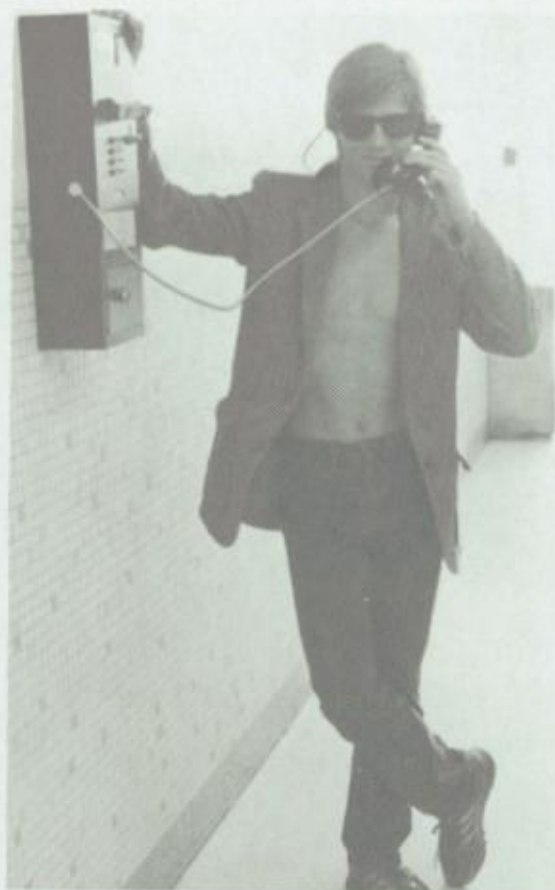

"WE ARE INVINCIBLE," proclaims male cheerleader John Robnett who is supported in that position by partners Dave Albers and Denny Ransom at the junior-senior volleyball game during homecoming week.

CRACKING THE WHIP is something most teachers do well, but computer/math instructor Ron Hohneke supplements the talent with appropriate dress as a gag at an early morning faculty meeting.

"YOU'VE GOTTA BE KIDDINI!" But substitute secretary Patti Stuchel was deadly serious about fun when she came trick or treatin' at ACHS classes to the delight of Jeff Knupp and Greg Brock in singles living classes just before Halloween.

USUALLY A DAPPER DAN, senior Dan Sinnott trades his Lacoste for a Joe Cool costume to impress the heavy metal set.

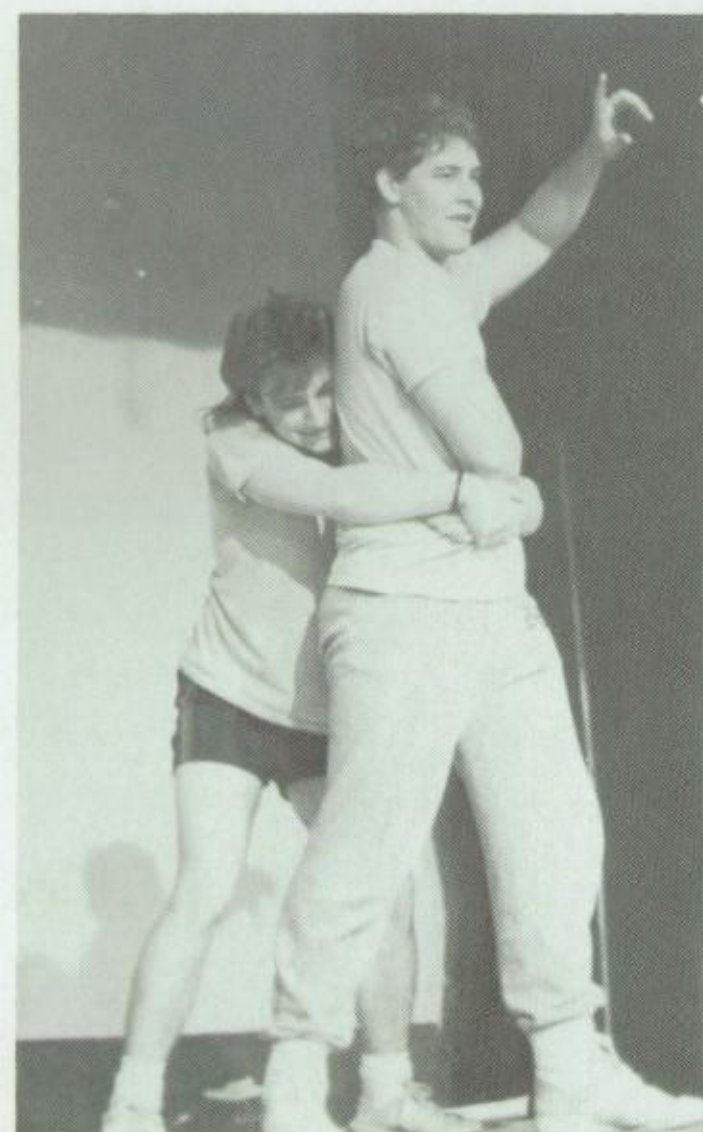

READY FOR WINTER FUN, junior Terry Cassett has all he needs to keep him warm over Christmas vacation — panda-face earmuffs, thermal-lined gloves and his American literature book for some hot reading.

TITANIA, (JULIE GANSMAN) QUEEN OF THE FAIRIES, falls in love with Bottom (Bill Belzer) because of a love potion after he has been transformed into an ass as two fairy servants (Patty Sinnott and Angie Richardson) look on.

"OH, HAPPY DAY!" Quince (Denny Ransom) is overjoyed at the sight of Bottom (Bill Belzer) whose temporary absence jeopardized their performance in front of the Duke.

Backstage at 'Midsummer Night's Dream'

The 1986 spring play "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was unlike any other that has been performed by the Albia drama department, according to director Matthew Foster.

Foster had several reasons for choosing the play. Since there was a large cast, many students had a chance to participate, a number for the first time.

In addition, the play wasn't a royalty play, leaving the drama department from $100 to $150 they would generally have had to pay the authors.

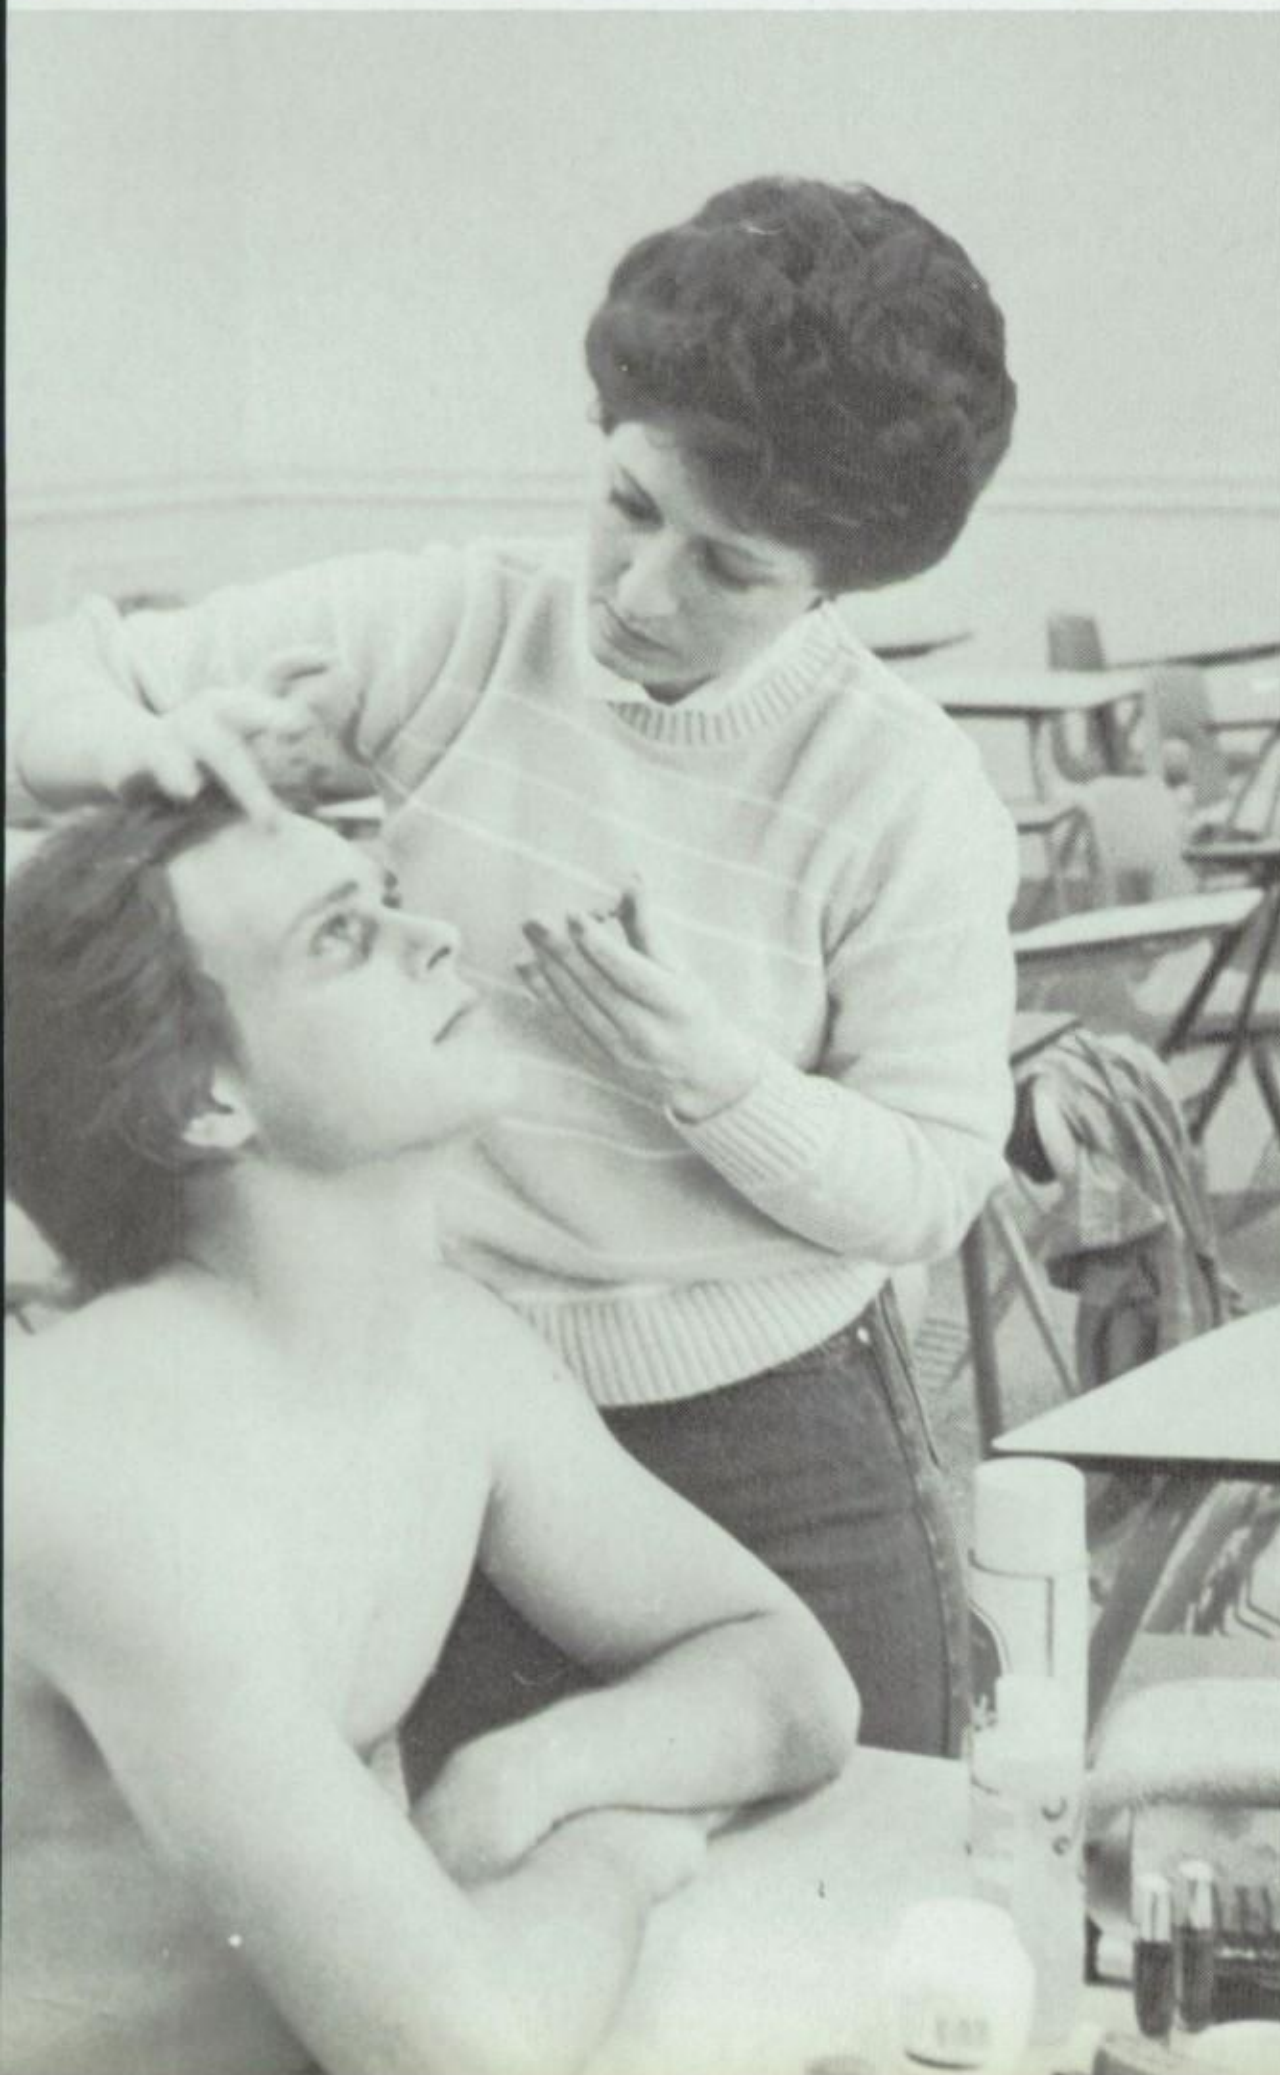

Also, because Shakespeare was such a gifted playwright, Foster felt there was a need to present one of his plays. He hoped that those attending would gain a better understanding of the language used during Shakespeare's day.

Despite the positive aspects, a Shakespearean play was never before considered for production during Foster's seven years at ACHS. Foster felt many people would shy away from a Shakespearean production, but a fairly good attendance to the play proved him wrong.

Aside from the obvious literary and acting benefits gained by the cast, other experiences were gained. The several actors playing fairies gained dancing knowledge from instructor Barb Liston during rehearsals.

Costumes and lighting people gained experience in that area also. The make-up people had one of the biggest jobs creating old men, a fairy queen and king, and various odd characters out of basically normal teenagers.

A LITTLE COLD CREAM HERE ON THE FORE-HEAD, Helen Foster, director Matthew Foster's wife, prepares Bob Sinclair's face for the application of eye make-up before the play.

WHILE IN CHARACTER, Demetrius (Roger Lathen) struggles with Helena (Shelia Behrens) in a rehearsal for "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"ROCKING OUT" was what many students enjoyed at Prom 86' since many songs did not require a partner.

STARTING TO FEEL THE EFFECTS, Teri Repp and Chris Klobnak sit out to take a breather as they watch other couples dance.

LIKE MANY OTHER COUPLES, Todd Ratliff and Jo Ellen Harrison take the opportunity to sit at the card tables set up by the junior class while listening to the Bullett Band from Otumwa which provided music and videos.

'A Super and Fantastic Evening' in many ways

Around 140 Albia high school promgoers enjoyed a Super and Fantastic Evening (SAFE) sponsored by concerned parents after the May 3 junior-senior prom.

Shirley Beary, one of the organizers, said, "It was super the way the kids behaved and fantastic the way the community supported the project."

Students attended the SAFE project at around 2 a.m., Sunday morning, May 4. Students and their dates were treated to free hamburgers, chips, soft drinks, juice, milk and rolls donated by various community groups and individuals.

Entertainment was provided by the rock band, Praire Rose, and a group of eighth grade students served as disc jockeys.

The SAFE project was held at the Albia Western Club where students played pool, foosball, video games, pinball and card games. Video cassette players were also hooked up so groups could watch "Police Academy II".

Throughout the morning drawings were held for various prizes including cash, teddy bears, $10 gas certificates, Pepsi T-shirts, Pizza Hut certificates, a curling iron, umbrella and hair dryer.

The highlight of the evening was the drawing of two pairs of Van Halen tickets given to Peggy and Mary Peterson. The party ended after the Van Halen tickets were given out at 5:30 a.m. with about 90 promgoers left.

Mrs. Beary said she "hopes they do continue this project. It was worthwhile and served its purpose."

Before the SAFE party, "A Night to Remember" was the theme by the juniors for the 1986 junior-senior prom.

Sharon's Hometown Studio took pictures of the couples as usual from 6-8 p.m. Then activities began for the junior-senior prom until 11:30 p.m.

Entertainment came from the Bullet Band from Ottumwa which provided music and videos. At 11:30 students went home or to a friend's house to get changed for the movie "Hitcher" at the Barbary Coast Opera House.

After the SAFE party, it was Sunday morning and time to go to breakfast or to church or to a much needed sleep. Junior John Robnett said that both prom and the SAFE party were great and he appreciated the SAFE program.

"HAND OVER THE STARS" is Adriana Loaiza's request to Janet Robinson so she can finish the entrance to the tunnel which couples used to enter the gym.

FOR ONE WEEK prior to the May 3 prom, juniors like Janet Robinson, Paul Hatfield, Kazuko Hirayoshi and Debbie Hutchinson transformed the ACHS gym into "A Night to Remember" through crepe paper, tinsel, and wall murals.

New party, banquet honor Albia upperclassmen

Juniors and seniors were kept busy during March and April attending honor dinners and a senior party.

Upperclassmen with a 3.00 or above grade point average were honored in March at a dinner sponsored by the First Christian Church.

The fifteenth annual dinner to honor scholastically high students featured a program presented by Judi Kotecki, a member of the Rathbun Area Mental Health Association. She spoke on how to cope with stress in everyday life.

Only honored students, faculty, and parents attended the dinner. A fee of $3.75 was charged for each adult; students attended free.

Fifteen juniors and eighteen seniors were eligible to attend with a large number in attendance.

Another honor banquet was held in early April for five ACHS seniors.

The South Central Conference Academic Honor Banquet, held at the Dutch Buffet in Pella, was originally proposed at a principal's conference three years ago by Principal Al Leber to recognize the academic achievement of the top five students from each of the thirteen conference schools.

The ACHS honorees were Jeff Knupp, who intends to major in accounting at Central College; Velma Reed, who plans to attend University of Iowa for business administration; Jeff Van Polen whose sights are on Iowa State University and chemical engineering; Jody Waters who has been accepted by the University of Iowa; and Cheri Whitson, who will major in business management.

Guest speaker Enfys McMurray, English instructor at Indian Hills Community College, gave the address.

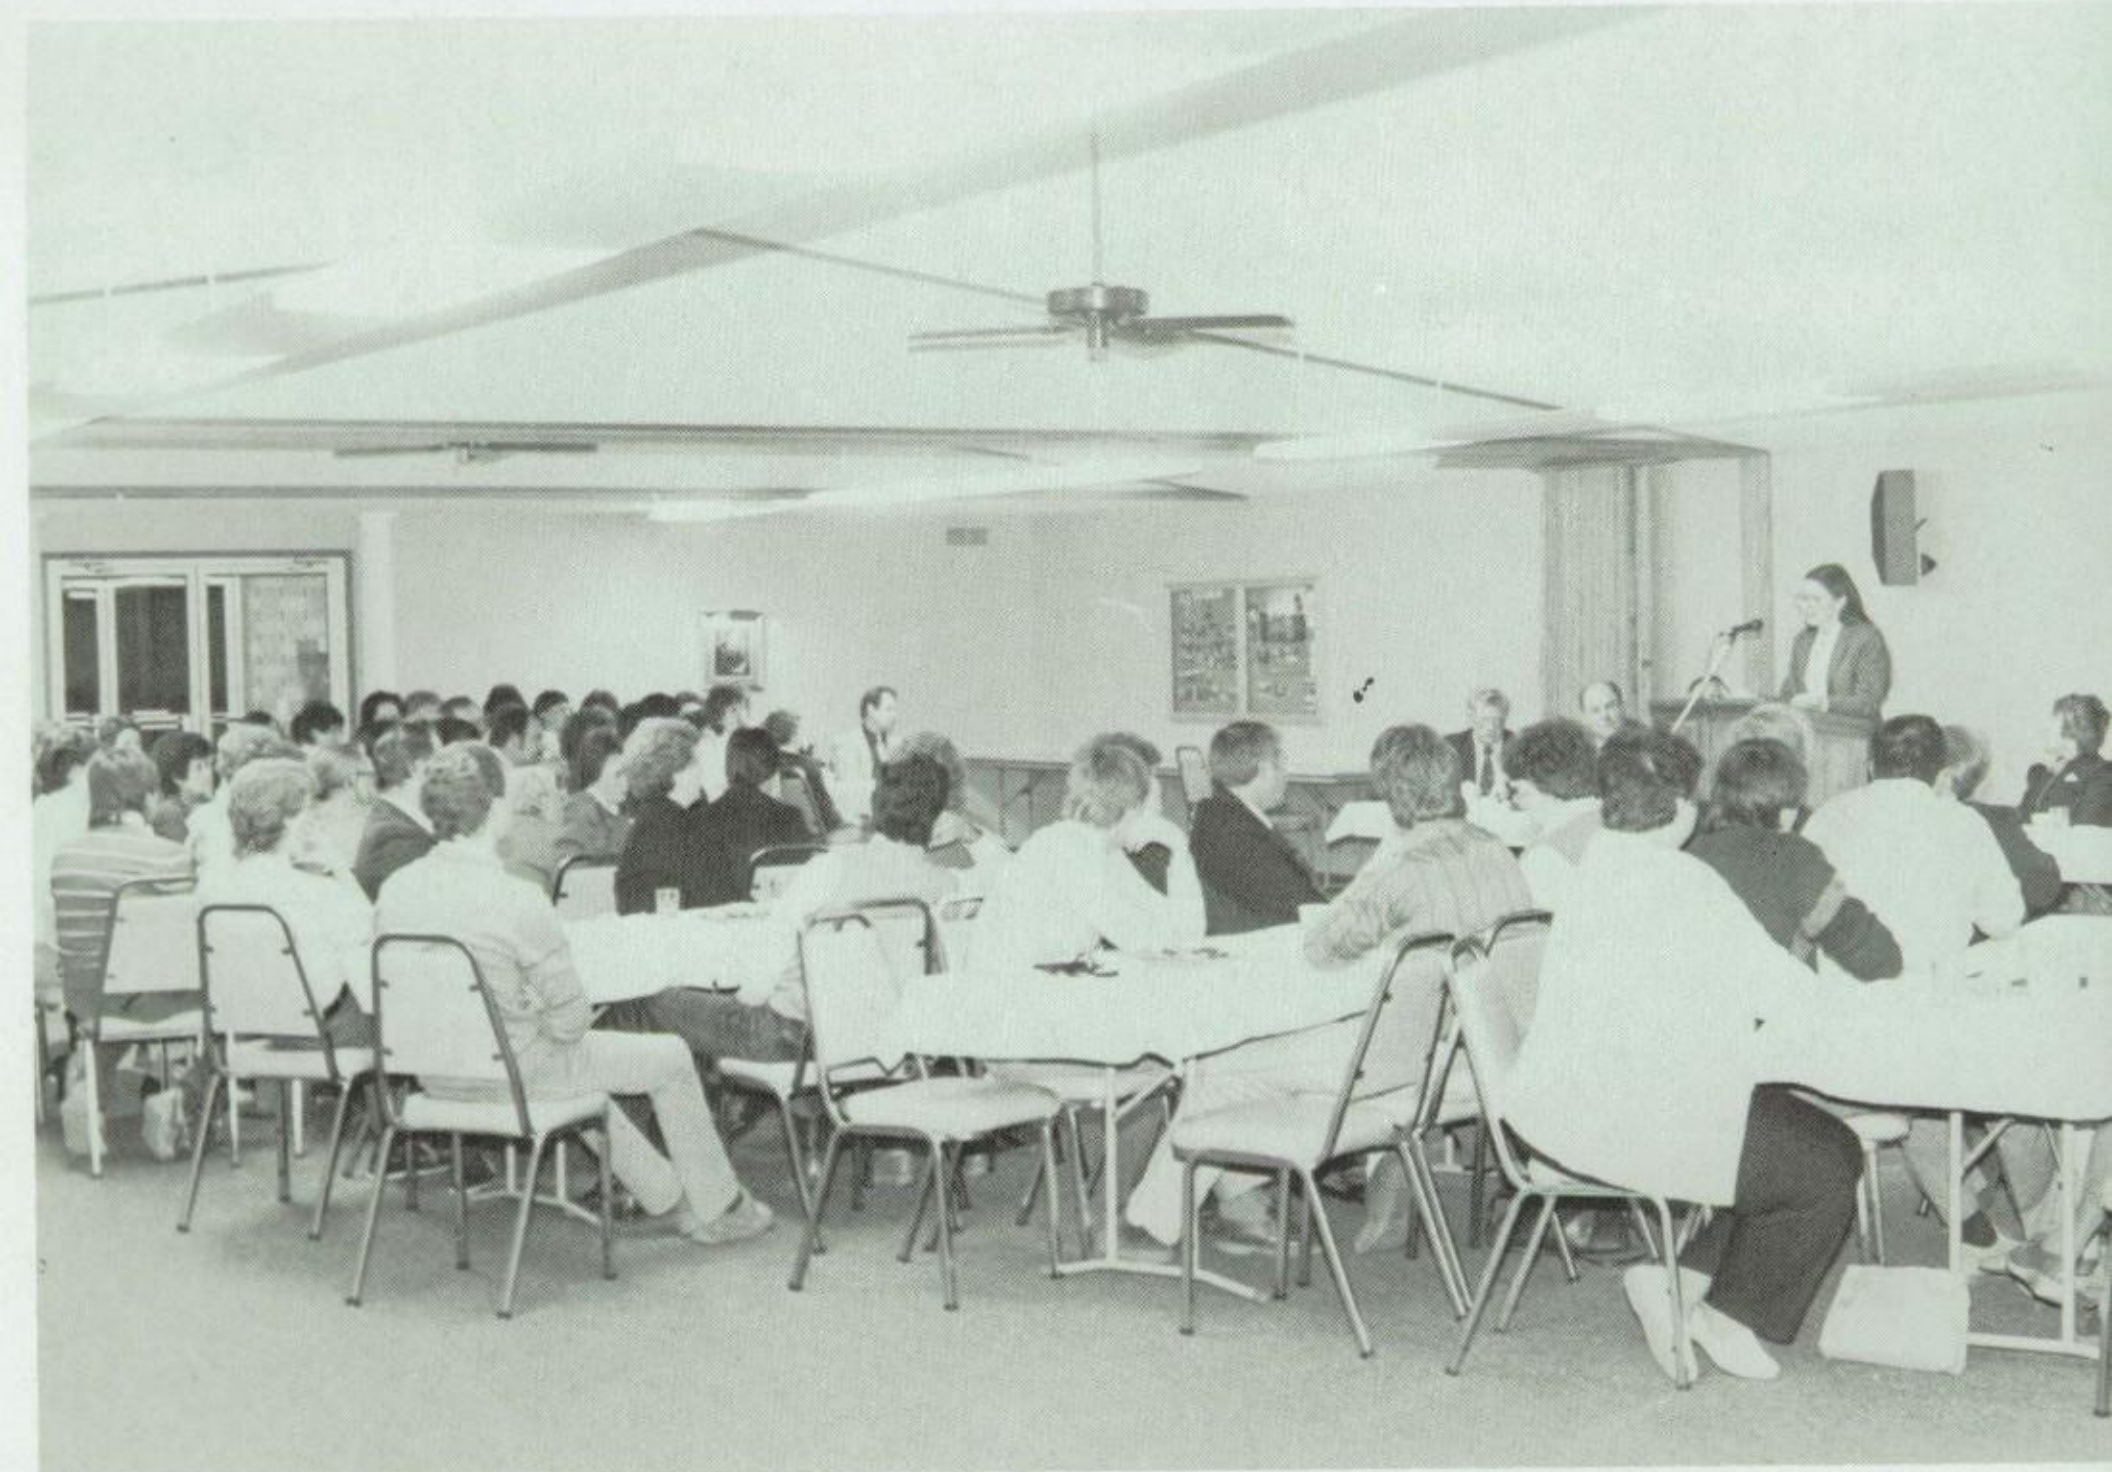

All seniors were invited to something different following the senior banquet on April 25. The class of 1986 parents headed by Grace Buol and Kathryn Burkman, sponsored a senior party at the Holiday Motel.

Prior to the party, seniors ate a buffet-style meal of ham or roast beef, mashed potatoes and gravy, and a salad at 6:30 p.m. at the country club.

Following the dinner, class officers read the class history and prophecies. Officers also gave out awards to some seniors and a few teachers.

The actual senior party was held from 8-11 p.m. Those attending went swimming, dancing or enjoyed themselves in the jacuzzi. Sandwiches, popcorn and pop were also available.

THIRTY-THREE SENIORS, JUNIORS and their parents were in attendance at the March 17 honor banquet to listen to speaker Judi Kotecki, member of the Rathbun Area Mental Health Association.

"MR. SUNGLASSES AWARD," along with a pair of sunglasses were given to senior Chuck Coram by Principal Al Leber at the senior banquet. The award was sparked by Coram's trend-setting sunglasses which he usually had with him at school.

HONOR BANQUET speaker, Judi Kotecki from the Rathbun Area Mental Health Association, speaks on stress in everyday life.

THE GREAT ALBIA SOLDIER AWARD was presented to four seniors including Clay Carter for his work in the army reserves.

IN PRAYER. Principal Al Leber and Vice Principal Doug Walter bow their heads as Kent Hulsey gives the invocation at the March 10 honor banquet.

AT THE APRIL 25 senior banquet, Michelle Bunch secretary-treasurer, and Kris Wool-lums, president, read the class prophecy to the seniors.

Assembly honors 108 with awards

As the end of the year came closer, it was time to award those seniors who strived for goals and broadened new horizons at the May 15 senior assembly.

Several traditional scholarships were presented including a $100 FFA scholarship to Noland Johnson, and the $100 Kenny Carter Award presented to Daryl Post.

1986 was a year of success for Jody Waters who was named valedictorian and Jeff Van Polen and Cheri Whitson as co-salutatorians. Cheri also received a $750 award from the Shield of Shelter Insurance Company.

Principal Al Leber presented the honorary awards. Rhonda Hohneke received the citizenship award; Clay Carter, AV; and Noland Johnson, agriculture award.

Norman Stocker and Lisa Flahive received the athletic department awards while the home economics award went to Velma Reed who, along with Lisa Flahive, read the class wills. Harold Major received the industrial arts award while the language arts department gave two awards, English to Michelle Bunch and Spanish to Jody Waters. Jody also received the math department award.

Music also gave two awards. Band went to Cheri Whitson and choir to Jon Jenson. John Jamieson and Sonja Swee were recognized by the physical education department.

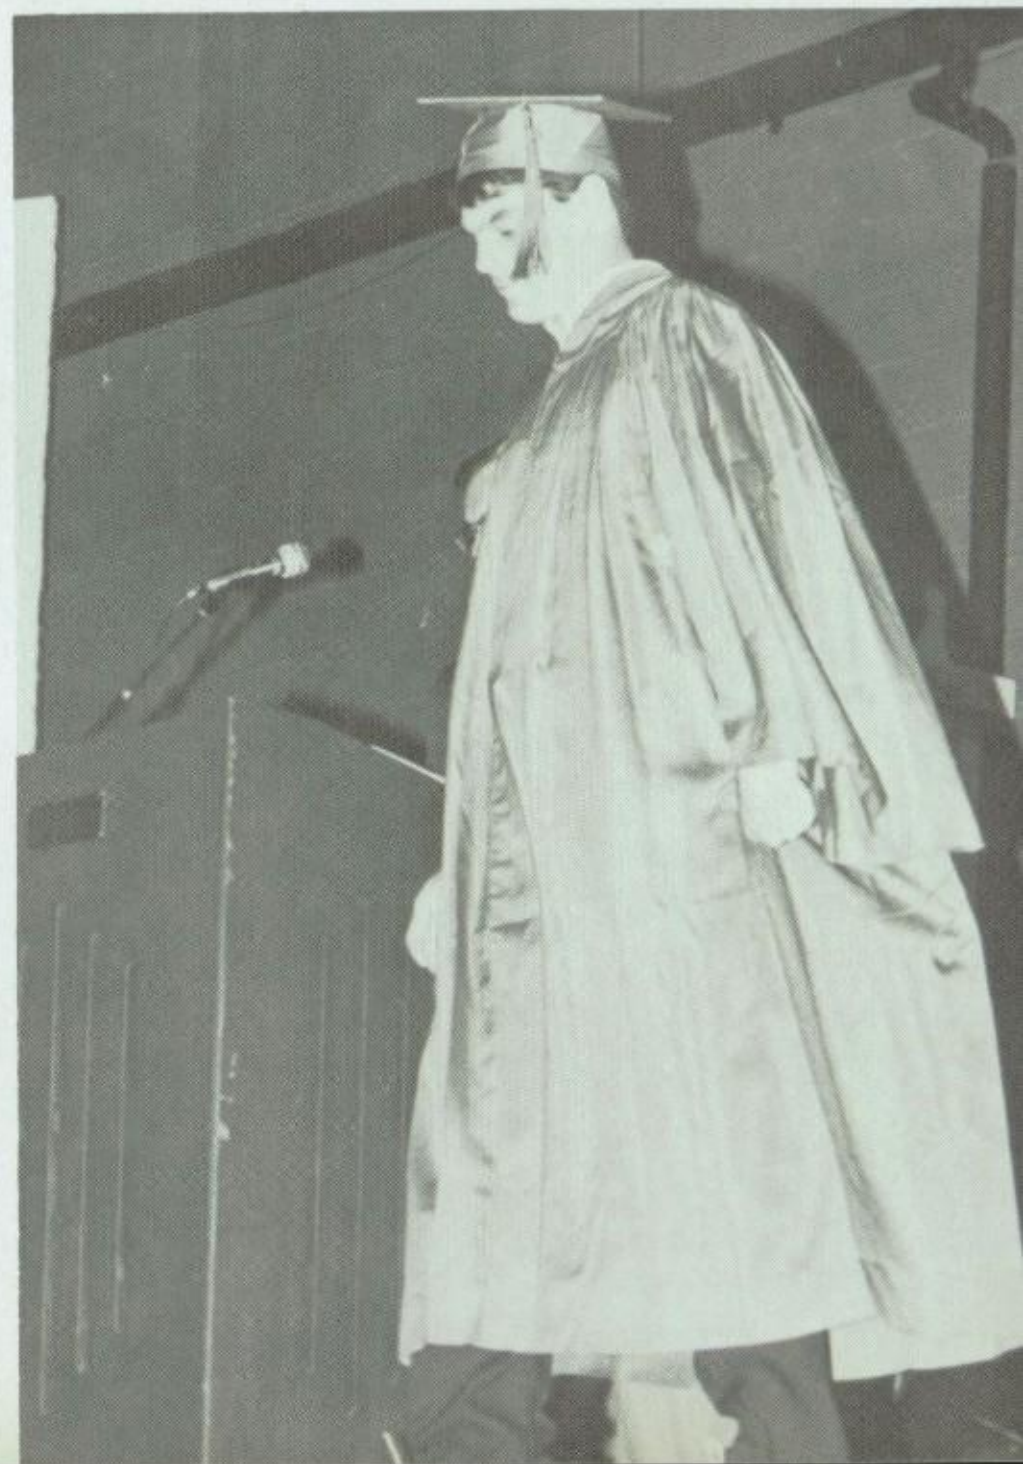

The senior class choir sang "That's What Friends Are For," and Kris Woollums finalized the senior year as she handed the class key over to junior class president Bob Sinclair.

VALEDICTORIAN JODY WATERS receives one of her six awards at Thursday's assembly in addition to receiving a medal for the Iowa Academy of Science Award.

AS SMILES ARE EXCHANGED, MEMORIES SHARED, FOOTPRINTS SET, the ACHS exchange students look about the many faces of the friends they've made while they receive a certificate of completion at ACHS. Jonas Andersson, Eric Berry, Kazuko Hirayoshi and Adrianna Loaiza will always be remembered and loved by their classmates.

STANDING TALL AND PROUD is John Jamieson after receiving his physical education honorary award from Principal Al Leber. John was one of the 14 recipients of school awards.

LENDING A HAND Marla Coady helps Brenda Clark prepare for the awaiting parents, faculty and students at the Thursday, May 15 senior assembly. Over $8,850 in scholarship money and nine honorary awards were presented to the 108 graduating seniors.

Three State of Iowa scholars, Velma Reed, Jeff Van Polen and Jody Waters, were also named. Secretary Michelle Bunch presented to Principal Al Leber the class gift which was divided into donations of $100 to the Ryan Showers fund, $1,000 toward landscaping the front of the high school building and $500 into the Peggy Hope Scholarship fund. They also gave $400 to the band's percussion section in memory of a classmate and friend Gregory Lynn Wright.

Reichardt speaks at commencement

COMMENCEMENT exercises were held at the Albia High School gymnasium at 7 p.m. on Saturday, May 17 with Des Moines businessman Bill Reichardt as commencement speaker.

After Principal Al Leber presented the honor awards, Jeff Van Polen and Cheri Whitson gave the co-salutatorian addresses.

Under the direction of Paul M. Peterson, the Albia concert choir sang "Everybody Has a Dream" by Billy Joel.

The board of directors from the Albia Community School District presented the diplomas to the 108 seniors and Jody Waters then gave her valedictorian address.

After Greg Brock gave the benediction, the concert band presented "Days of Glory" by Cacavas for the recessional.

Graduation was not only the last event for the seniors at ACHS, but also for band director Leonard Bonker who resigned effective August, 1986 and accepted a position teaching in La Feria, Texas. A memorial scholarship was set up by the ACHS band parents.

Class officers were Kris Woollums, president; Greg Brock, vice president; and Michelle Bunch, secretary-treasurer.

LAST MINUTE togetherness brings a sweet sadness to the 108 class members of ACHS as they remember their past and hope for their future during the May 17 graduation prayer led by valedictorian Jody Waters.

LEADING THE PROCESSIONAL into commencement is new ACHS student Connie Ballatak followed by Karen Barnes, Jim Bates, Andy Beal, Donald Beary and Kevin Berhens. Guest speaker was William Reichardt, a clothier from Des Moines.

AFTER 21 YEARS of work and honors, band director Leonard Bonker resigned from ACHS leaving behind three consecutive years of number one ratings in state marching competition.

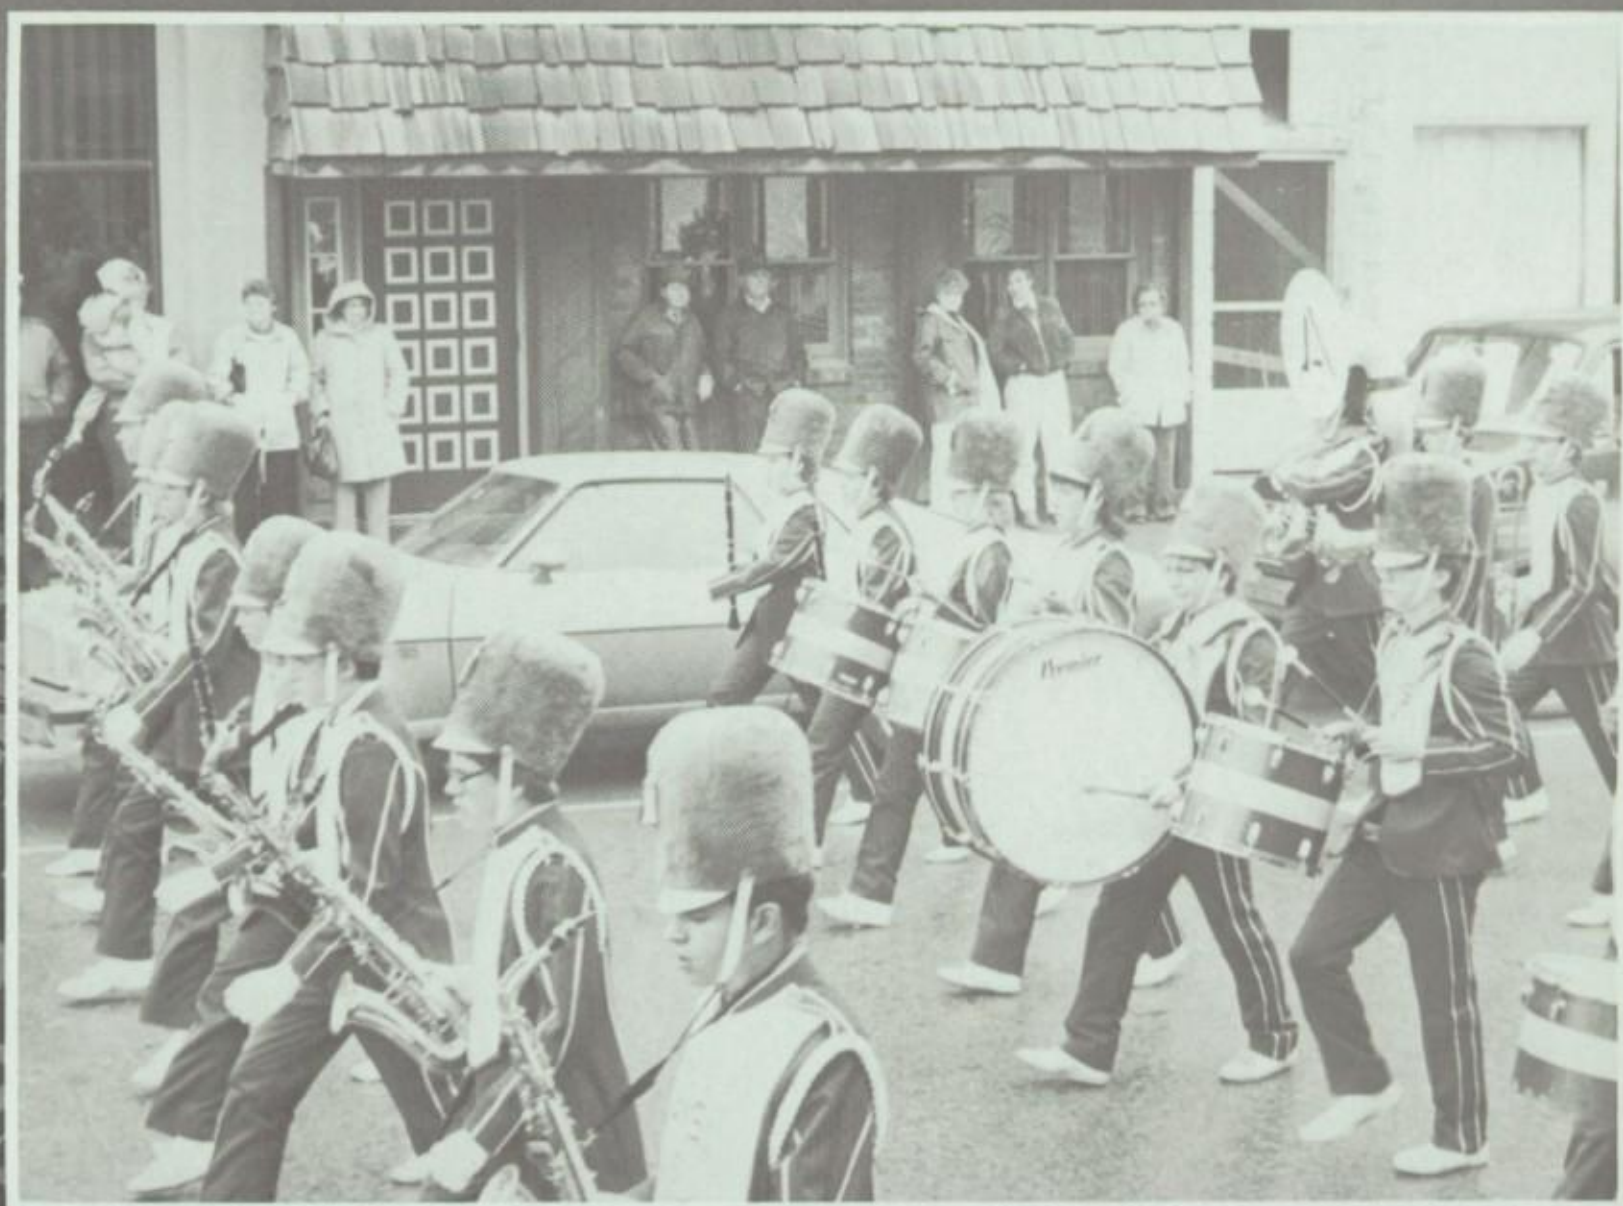

AGER BUNCH of sophomore fans led by Ellen Scieszinski and Tina Carter gather on the balcony to cheer on the boys basketball team.

THE THREE MUSKATEER juniors Katie Nolan, Michelle Flattery, and Dawn Simms stumble around in the music room due to the fact their shoes are tied together.

People

THE SENIOR FLOAT gets its final touches from workers Kris Woollums and Michelle Duer before being taken out for an early ride when the seniors took a spin around the square before the homecoming parade.

A MARCH ON BENTON for homecoming is only one of a number of events the Albia band members participated in during the year.

Life reflects art

IN HIS STRIPES AND WHITES, junior Scott Reeves reflects the fashion of the popular T.V. star Don Johnson of "Miami Vice" as he visits his locker for his books before school.

Tomorrow's trendsetters

Have fashions changed during the years? Not judging from the 40's styles back in vogue with lowered waistlines, padded shoulders and darker colors.

Florescent colors in clothes may still be around, but their brightness faded away in 1986.

Also popular were the casual styles made famous by Don Johnson of TV's "Miami Vice."

Fashions reflected not only the mood but how people acted, and "casual" described the attitude of the 80's.

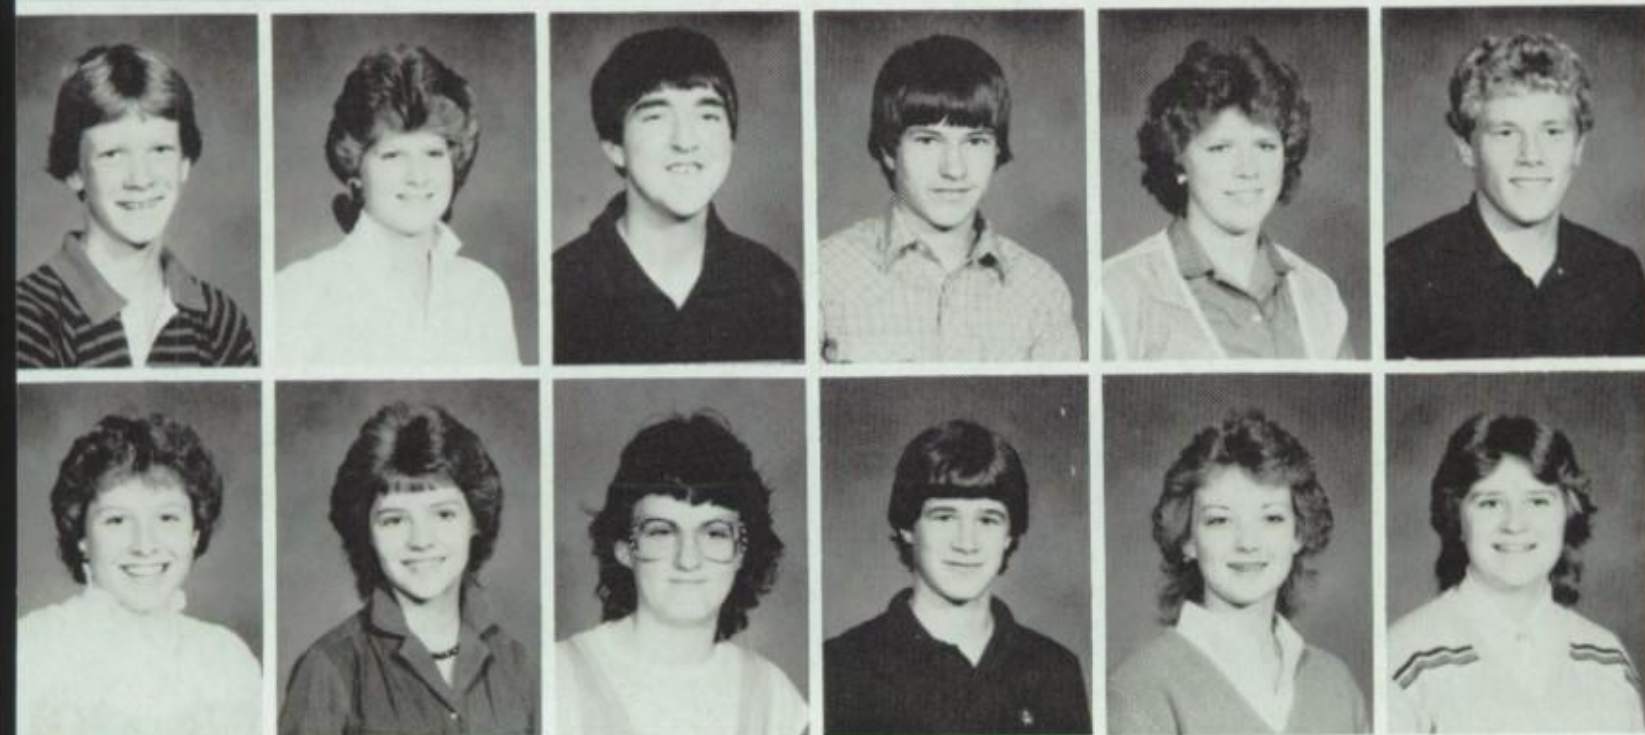

Along with stand-up collars and Shaker sweaters, also big on the teenage scene were Walkman radios and each edition of Trivial Pursuit.

As any trendsetter knows, today's reject could be tomorrow's fashion statement.

WHILE ORGANIZING HER ADS for yearbook, senior Deniese Meinsma rocks out to the music of her Walkman radio in the journalism room.

BABY BLANKETS, BOOTIES AND SWEATERS are just a few items senior Jody May has experience in making. Jody has been knitting since her freshman year and plans to continue the hobby after high school.

Hobbies reflect collectors' interests

Hobbies can be handed down from father to son and mother to daughter. They can be cherished for generations or occur on the spur of the moment.

Some students share their hobbies with their parents such as junior Tom Murphy who has helped his father with his stamp collection for many years.

Some hobbies can reflect the collector's interests like the baseball card collection of freshmen Mitchell Henerson.

Whatever the pastime, of long-standing or short duration, hobbies are an interest well worth the effort.

PURCHASED FOR $.25, "White's New Complete Arithmetic" is one of approximately 20 antique books junior Jason McLaren found at a garage sale.

Door prizes to videos

Innovations mark 5 dances

A change of pace seemed to be in order for the five dances held in the CHS gymnasium from 8-11 p.m.

Sponsored by the classes and two organizations, student council and drama club, innovations ranged from door prizes to video entertainment.

For the first time at the Oct. 13 homecoming dance sponsored by student council members, the traditional live band format was changed to large-screen video entertainment. Many couples thought it a unique idea that should be continued annually.

Music for the freshmen-sponsored dance was provided by radio station Q-102 from Des Moines. Many students attending thought the dance was great but needed more excitement.

Layton Zbornik's Albia Entertainment Company provided the music for the sophomore-sponsored Valentine's dance. Prizes were awarded to several couples.

Loren Sisler won the grand prize drawing, a large super supreme Pizza Hut pizza, with several others winning bags of Valentine's candy and personal pan pizzas.

"I was very pleased with the cooperation of the sophomore class and its sponsors as well as the students at the dance," said one of the sponsors, Hjalmer Lindberg.

Drama club noted for unusual themes sponsored the April 5, April's Fool dance.

Of course "the" dance of the year, the junior-senior prom held May 3, was the biggest event of all.

Attendance at all dances was up from previous years making them more enjoyable to those participating.

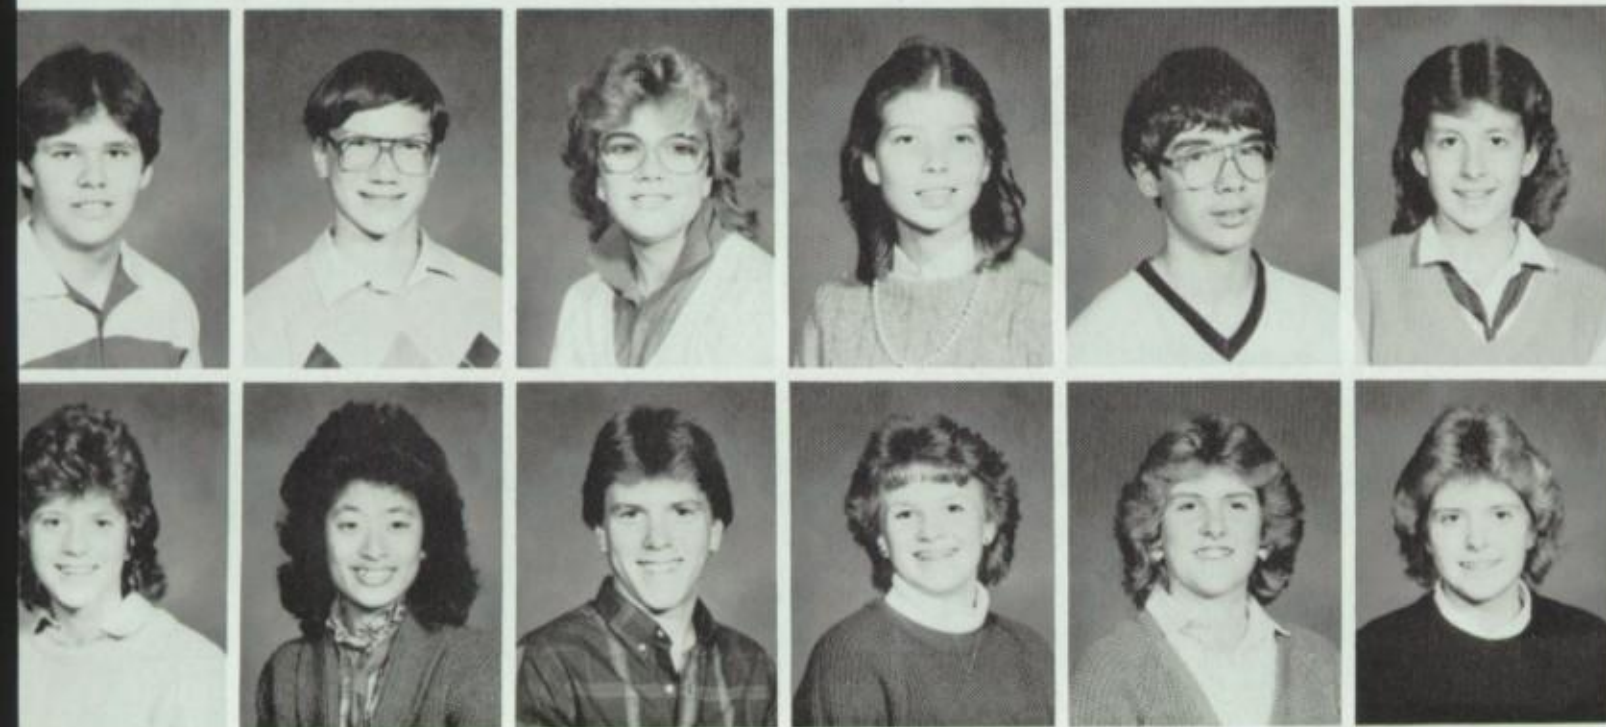

THE LATEST DANCE STEP occupies juniors Dave Albers and Roger Lathan at the December Christmas dance.

OUT OF APPROXIMATELY 233 students attending the Valentine's dance, Brian Quinn's name was drawn by sophomore sponsors Jan Bridger and Hjalmer Lindberg for the door prize, a bag of Valentine's candy.

BENTON

THIS STREET SIGN probably depicts the most popular pastime of all high school students — driving up and down Benton. Teens have been traveling this street while waving and honking at their friends for years.

SOPHOMORE JILL WELLS and senior Pam McMillen enjoy their cheeseburgers and french fries at A&W while they leisurely discuss friends, school and their big plans for the weekend.

SCOOPING THE LOOP with a friend on a Saturday night, senior Luke Corso makes his way around the square in his 1979 red jeep.

Teen hangouts — there seemed to be a lack of them in Albia. With the closing of the Great American Ice Cream Factory and Mike's Pizza Center, there weren't many places where kids could go to hang out with friends, snack and just goof around.

For awhile, video games were in the "in" thing for entertainment. Albia did have two video arcades for a short time, but as the popularity of video games waned, these arcades closed.

Why all the closings? Because of the poor economy in Iowa. A small town like Albia just wasn't able to support these businesses.

Other attractions, however, did take their place. Some students went to Pizza Hut, and some to A&W. Many went to the Barbary Coast Opera House to laugh, cry and be terrified as they watched their favorite movies and lunched on popcorn and other snacks. Some went to dances at the Eagles Club, the American Legion Hall, the KC Hall and the Western Club on Friday and Saturday nights to dance to their favorite music.

Probably the favorite pastime of all teenagers, though, remained "scooping the loop." On a Friday night in the warm months of summer, many cars could be seen cruisin' up and down Benton with windows down and music blasting.

Kids stopped and parked on the square to talk to their friends and decide who's riding with who. No matter what other businesses close in Albia, Benton will always be there.

More than cheers and pep

Assemblies — several different kinds — were scheduled throughout the school year.

Some were sports-oriented, held on the day of a game to inspire students, faculty and parents to attend the upcoming event. There were assemblies for football, volleyball, basketball and wrestling.

Each assembly was usually made up of coach pep talks, cheerleader routines, music by the band, occasional talks from team members and an abundance of chants, cheers and applause from the audience.

Participation in the assemblies was usually achieved through capturing the "jug." The cheerleaders began and each class tried to yell the chant the loudest by taking turns. Teachers judged and the class that yelled the loudest held a brown jug awarded by the cheerleaders.

The homecoming assembly was probably the most versatile of the school year. Student council, which sponsored an activity for each class, chose several class members to come out on the gym floor and participate in the events. Contests such as toilet paper wrapping, jello slurping, marshmallow stuffing, and a Mountain Dew chug-a-lug netted winners prizes such as candy bars, Pizza Hut pizza and liters of Mountain Dew. Mayor Bernard Carr even attended to cheer on the student body.

An assembly of a different kind was the Air Force Band Starlifter performance in February. The six-member band pulled juniors Sheila Behrens and Kathryn Kearney out of the audience to sing to them. Sophomore Jason Summers played the maracas for the band and soon almost everyone was up on the gym floor dancing. The band featured up-to-date rock & roll from Tina Turner and Starship and some fifties songs from Elvis Presley and other artists.

IN A HUDDLE, teachers plan their strategy for beating their student opponents in the pre-Christmas volleyball tournament held in the gymnasium.

Different sports for different

JOGGING

SOPHOMORE TRACK MEMBER Jill Wells jogs after school to build her stamina, speed and coordination hoping she will win in the up-and-coming first track meet of the season with Lamoni.

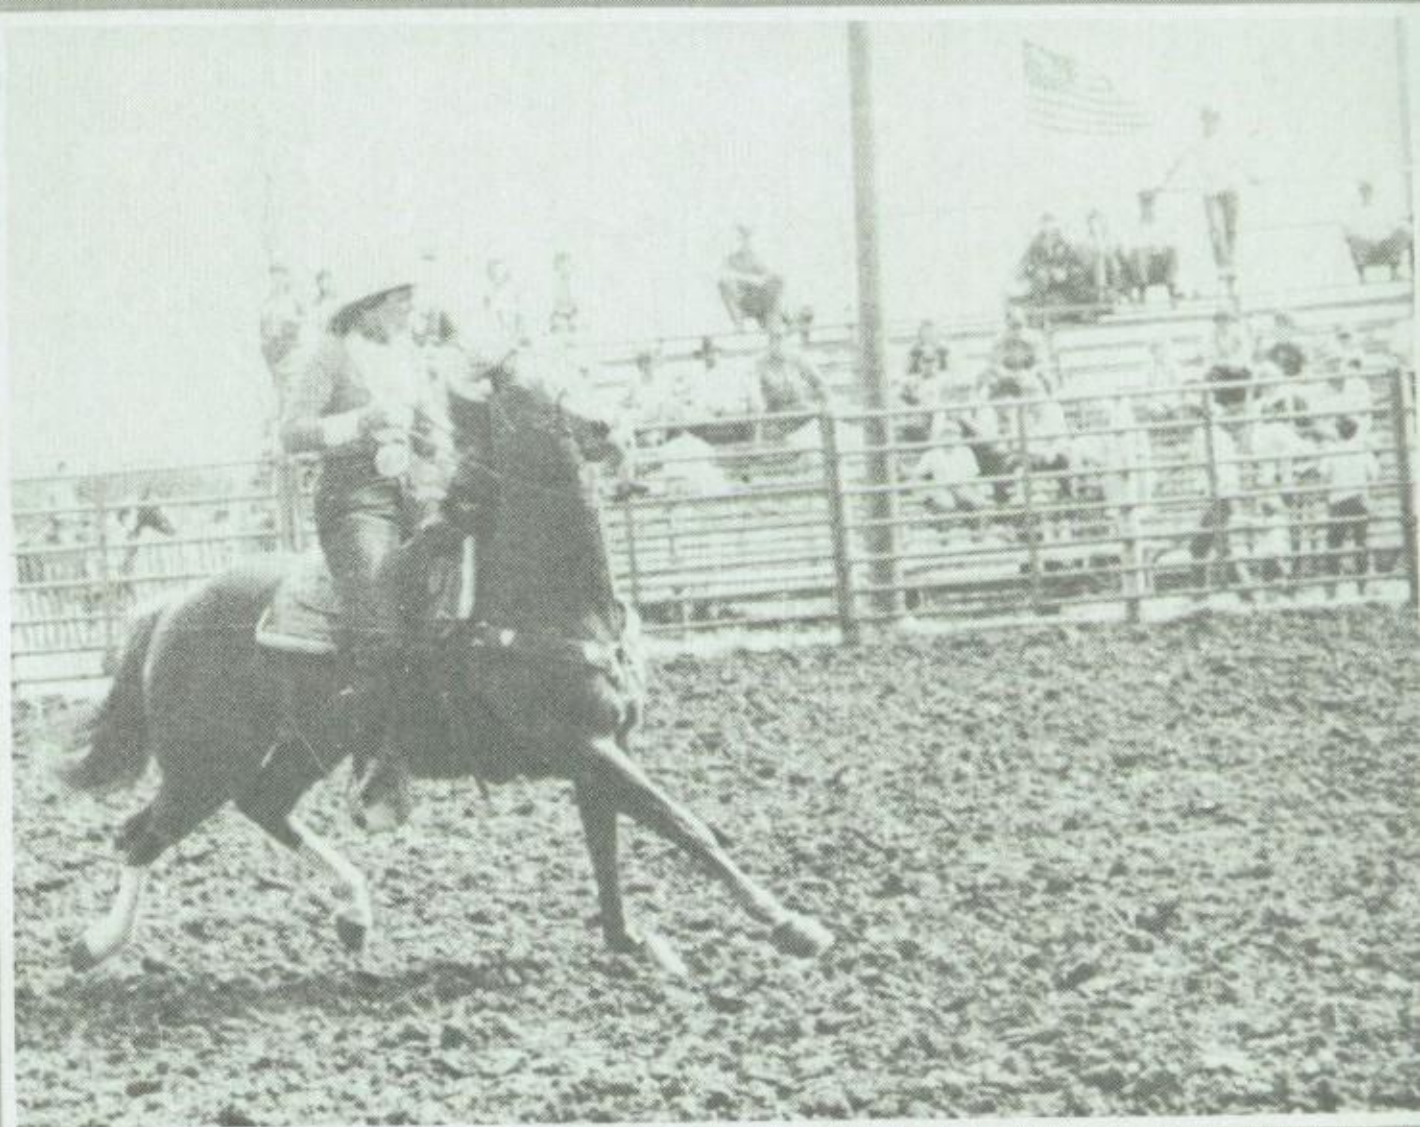

Many students are involved in sports programs offered by the school. There is a sport for almost anything you want to do — football, basketball, volleyball, cheerleading, golf, track, tennis, baseball and softball.

But there are several different sports that kids enjoy outside of their school activities. In the summer, some swim at the local swimming pools or at Rathbun Lake. Many enjoy waterskiing while others like to jog and bicycle to keep in shape and practice for track.

The Iowa High School Rodeo provides strenuous activity for those who like to mix ability and competition.

Some teens, however, prefer sports that aren't as competitive or group-oriented. For fun, relaxation and entertainment, some popular pastimes are hunting, fishing, snowmobiling, boating and camping.

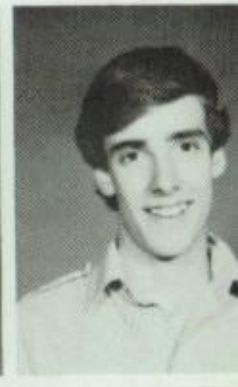

Winter or summer, the Albia area offers a variety of choices for the avid athlete.

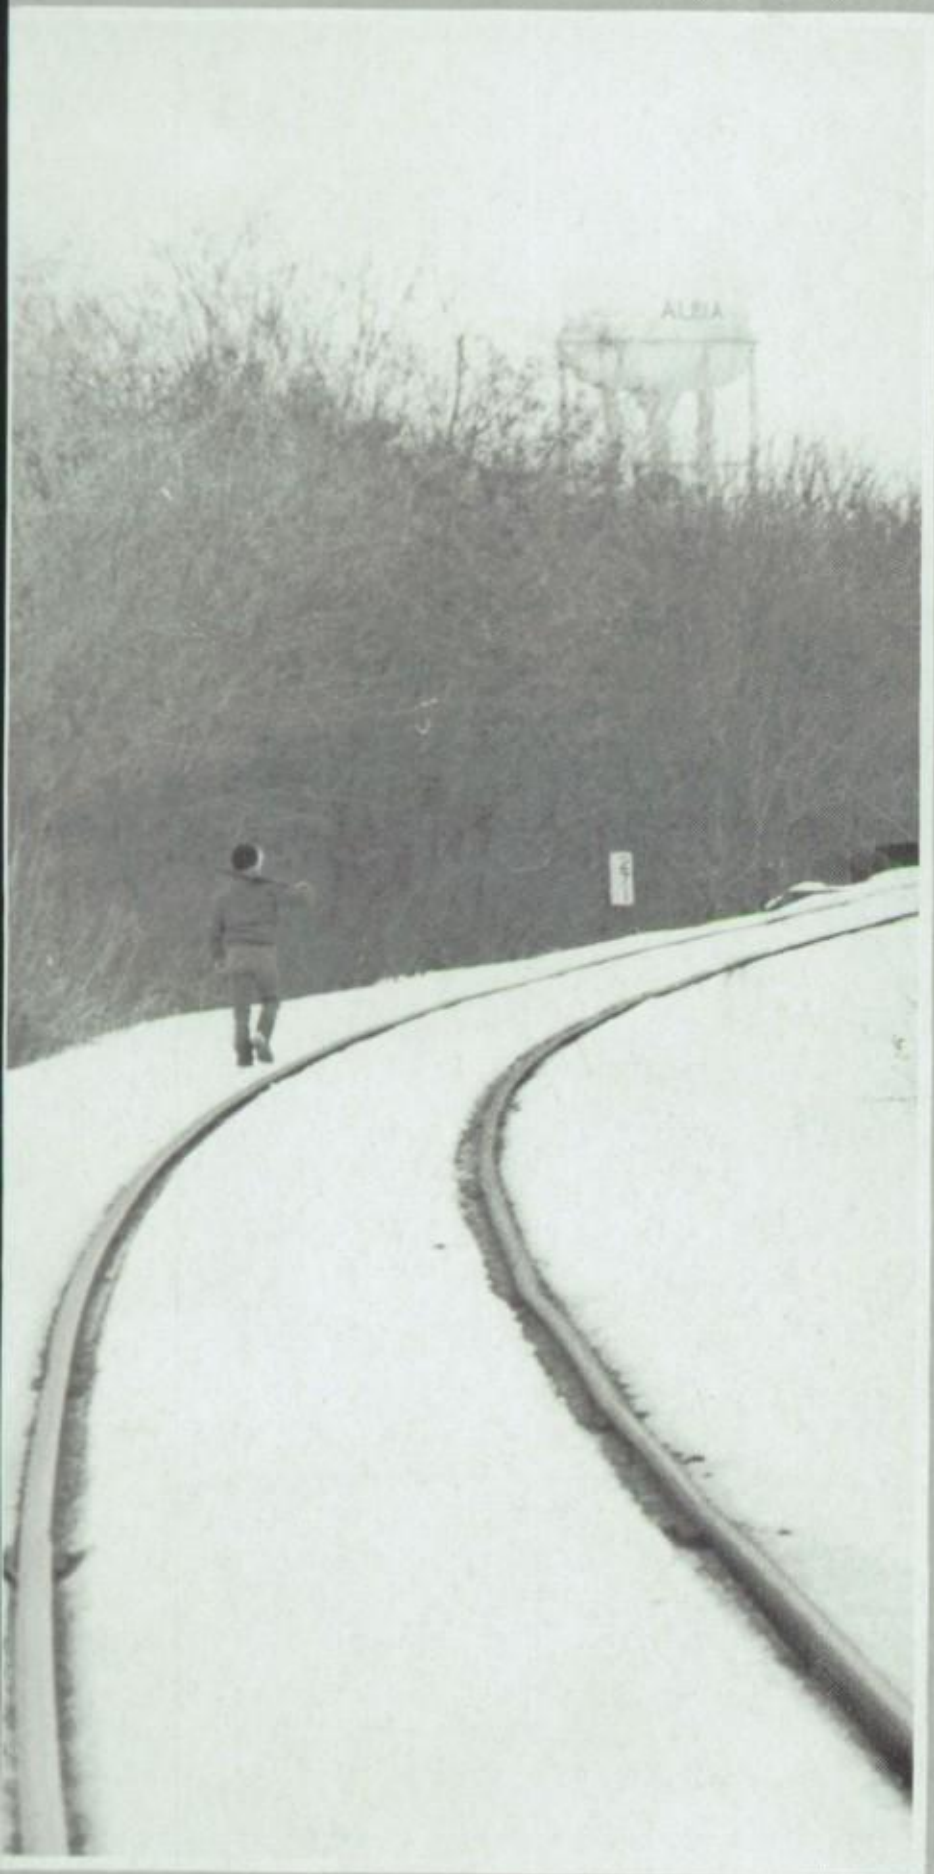

THE IOWA HIGH SCHOOL RODEO allows area high school students to participate in a variety of activities such as pole bending.

AN UNKNOWN YOUNG MAN combines the sports of hiking and hunting into one for exercise and enjoyment.

AROUND

Craftsmanship

WELCOME TO THE LAND OF AMERICAN LITERATURE. In Mrs. Sprouse's room before school, Patty Teno explains Emily Dickenson to Kazuko Hirayoshi while Jonas Andersson goes for the more relaxed style of Walt Whitman.

characterizes home to Kazuko, Jonas

Every year ACHS adds to its cultural personality with a bit of history from other countries.

Jonas Andersson, Albia's second foreign exchange student from Sweden, and Kazuko Hirayoshi, the first girl in five years from Japan, sacrificed one year away from family and friends to spend in the United States.

Not only did they affect life in Albia but took home elements and aspects of the American lifestyle.

Both agree their favorite food was Pizza Hut pizza, but they differed on favorite TV shows. Kazuko loved the rockin' sounds of MTV's hot videos while Jonas went for the detective life of "Magnum, P.I."

Dire Strait's big hit "Money for Nothing" was not only a hit with American rockers but also scored with the music-loving exchange students.

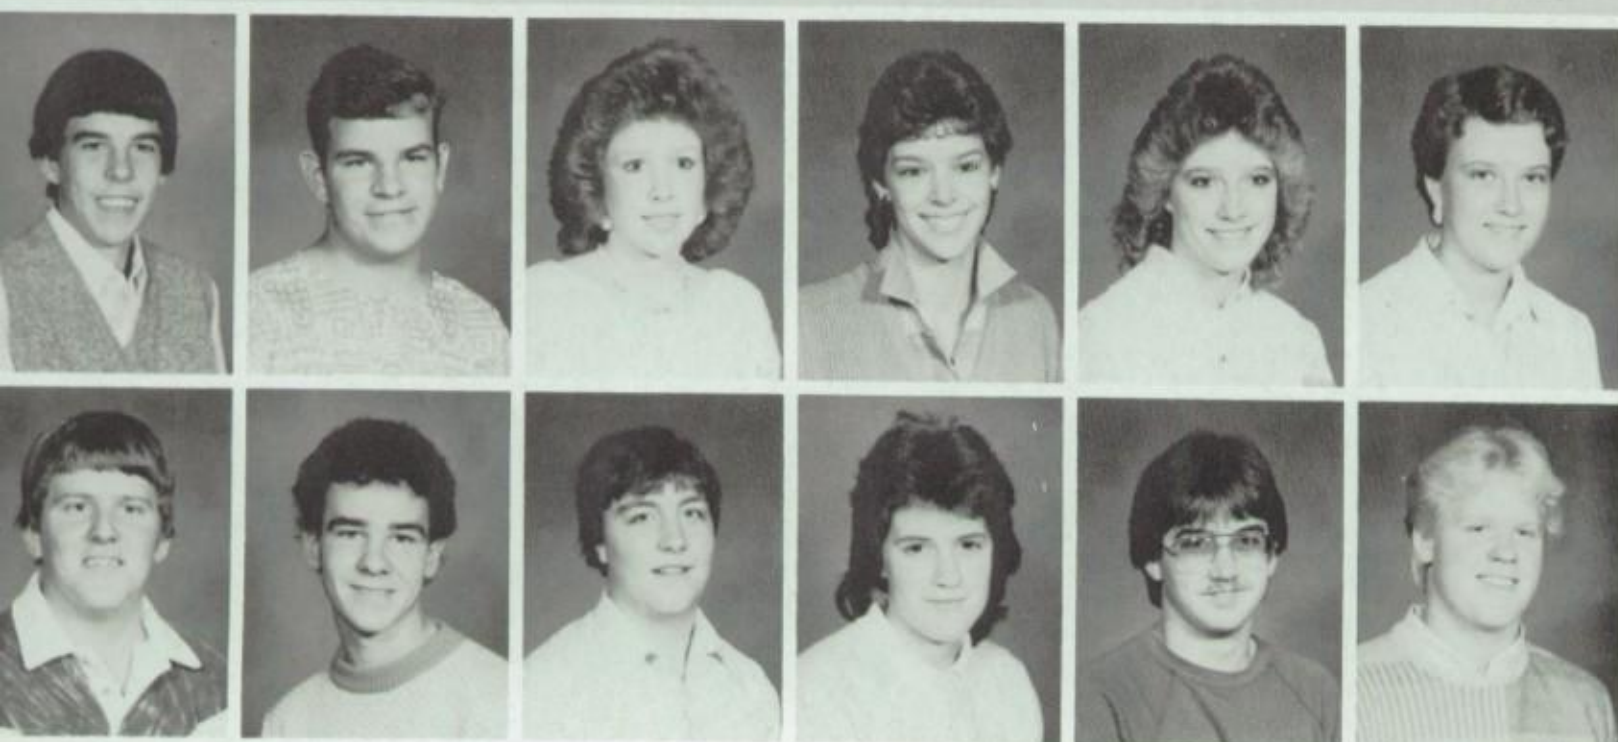

During the year, Jonas stayed with the Dean Stocker family and said, in some ways, American family life is very different than life in Sweden. "In Sweden," said Jonas, "you are with your family more often rather than one kid off at football practice and another some place else as it is in America."

Kazuko, who stayed with the Wendall Folkerts, said she loved the extra-curricular activities the entire Folkerts family took part in as well as receiving support from family and friends.

Each student said they found in America new friends, some differences and a whole new way of looking at both countries.

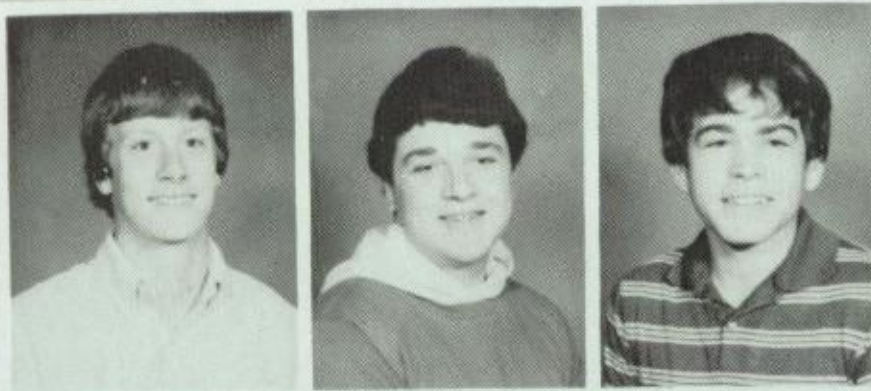

THE DALAHAST HORSE expresses Sweden's fine artwork as it has been done for many years. Kazuko's dress, with its silks and jewels, demonstrates Japan's fine clothmaking.

WE COME TOGETHER

Because everyone smiles in the same language

ONE OF THE hardest things about coming to America was leaving my family and friends," said Eric who will return to Mexico in June.

Eric Berry, Albia's third Mexican exchange student, and Adriana Loaiza from Colombia, recognized a bit of home in each other as they tried to adjust to an American culture.

Sharing the Spanish language helped each feel more comfortable trying to communicate in English.

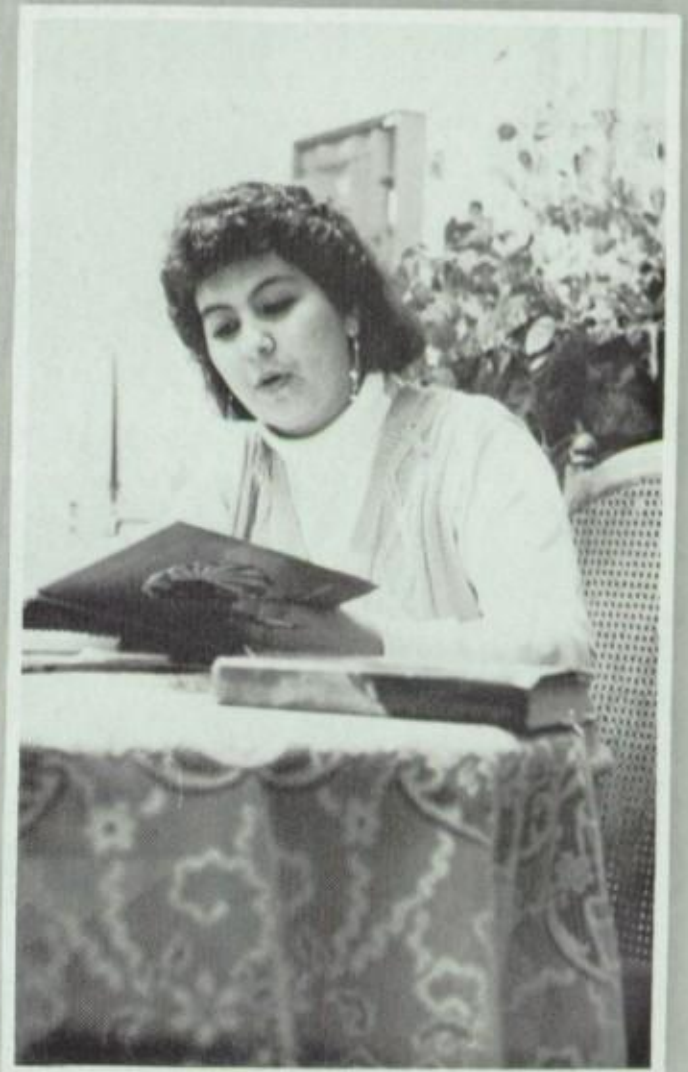

Because television and food seem to be universal, both quickly acquired a taste for the American versions.

Adriana, who stayed with Harold and Gloria Mick, enjoyed the comedy, family-oriented program "The Cosby Show" while Eric, staying with the Mike Lawrence family, agreed with Swedish student Jonas Andersson about the merits of "Magnum P.I."

Concerning food, both picked dessert as their favorite. Strawberry pie was Adriana's choice and after school, Eric enjoyed eating chocolate cake.

Adriana said she will miss her family and friends in Albia as will Eric, but both look forward to returning to their native home.

BECAUSE OF THE LANGUAGE BARRIER, American literature is one of Adriana's most difficult subjects. However, her least favorite subject is typing because the techniques are different.

Friends come

Friendship is one of those necessities of life that you take for granted. Like a car or good health. You miss all three when they're gone but rarely spare a thought for each when you possess it.

Friends, like friendship, come in all shapes, sizes and colors. Friends, like friendship, well as how to choose your friends, also seem to change over the years.

When you're young, say five or six, a friend shares your cookies, helps relieve the boredom on a rainy day, and tells Mom and Dad someone else broke the window. But friends can also be found in cold-nosed, stuffed teddy bears.

Being human really isn't a requirement of a friend when you're six or so. A book loved for years or a faithful pet also qualifies as a friend, no matter how old you are.

FRIENDSHIP JOINS TWO CULTURES as Columbia native Adriana Loaiza and Kazuko Hirayoshi from Japan discuss a third culture in American Literature.

A FRIEND is someone who understands your past, believes in your future and accepts you today just the way you are.

n all sizes!

When you're 12 or 13, friends go exploring with you, snicker over private jokes and learn to keep secrets from cooey older brothers and sisters.

At 14, you and your friend try out for track, football or volleyball.

At 15, no one is more important than your best friend." You will defend that friend to the end of the earth. That friend is someone so special that you would do anything for them.

When you're 17 or 18 and graduating, that friend seems like a fixture that has been a part of your life forever. He's someone to go to the movies with or go to the Pizza Hut. Or just stay at home and watch that scary movie that you have seen a million times.

As the years go by and you mature, your friends change to the people you work with, your neighbors, the people you go to church with and those the same age as you.

After many years you'll look back and see that friend, and thank him for all the encouragement that he gave you during the years and realize what a true friend he was.

CRAMMING IN THE HALLWAY before school, juniors Duane Steenhoek and Susan Mordan study for a Spanish test.

JOBS: Offer pride as well as $$$

When considering a part-time job, high school students first look at the salary and then at the enjoyment to be gained.

What should be considered before applying for a job? Senior Melodie Grimm, waitress at the A & W Restaurant, said "The money interests me most, but I enjoy meeting people, and this job was the way of meeting people."

Money, however, isn't always the important drawing card. If the work involved is challenging, most students will consider an application. Some people, however, don't have to apply.

Senior Bob Burkman, a woodcutter, didn't have to apply for the job he has. All he needed to get started was a truck and chainsaw. His father already had the truck and the wood was in Burk-man's backyard, so he could get right to it.

Bob, who has worked part-time at his job for four years, enjoys his work but not all the time. Bob said he sometimes wishes he could work a couple hours on Saturday and Sunday instead of every day after school and all day Saturday and Sunday.

According to Bob, all those hours do interfere with other things like schoolwork. Bob said many nights he doesn't finish his schoolwork because as soon as school is dismissed, it's out to the timber until dark. Responsibility is a major factor in any job part or full-time.

Responsible for approximately 15 children she works with at the Albia's

Daycare and Preschool, Laura Culbertson is on hand mornings and afternoons to take walks and oversee adventures.

Despite the responsibility involved, most ACHS part-time workers enjoy their jobs and measure the job's worth in pride as well as dollars.

vie for title

A memory of a lifetime for seven girls. In June, anxious and nervous participants filled the high school auditorium waiting for the Albia Junior Miss competition to begin. As the rows began filling up, so did the suspense.

"The show is ready to begin," stated Layton Zbornik, the host of the pageant. Finally the curtains opened and out came the competitors in their formal gowns. As they walked to "We Are The World," they individually introduced themselves.

Next was poise and appearance. This category dealt with how the contestants were able to walk in formal gowns, posture, etc.

A week prior to the show, the girls were interviewed and their scholastic scores were judged. They also practiced their individual and fitness routines. "Lots of hard work filled the week," commented Kris Woollums, "but it was worth it when show time came."

It was finally time for the judges to leave the auditorium and decide who would be the next Junior Miss.

Jody Waters received the scholastic award as well as runner-up in fitness.

Sonja Swee placed second runner-up in the pageant.

Kris Woollums received second runner-up in entertainment and the Spirit of Junior Miss as well as third runner-up in the competition. Cheri Whitson was second in scholastic, first in poise and appearance, and placed first runner-up.

Lisa Flahive was crowned Albia's 1985 Junior Miss winning first in entertainment and fitness and second runner-up in poise and appearance.

Lisa first became aware of and anxious to be in Junior Miss when her sister, Kendra Sinclair, was crowned Albia's first Junior Miss in 1981.

Lisa commented, "The best part about the competition was getting to be closer friends with everyone that competed and meeting the sponsors of the pageant."

Lisa advanced to the Iowa Junior Miss competition held in Ottumwa Nov. 22 and 23 where she stayed with the Jim Seppala family.

She emerged from that contest as second runner-up in poise and appearance.

Students ask 'Now what?'

Each year as seniors prepare to graduate, the all-important question asked is "Now what?" According to counselor Roger Cox, approximately 53 percent of the ACHS seniors go on to college while two percent enter the military.

Both options were explored by interested juniors and seniors throughout the year when different representatives came to ACHS to recruit students.

The process began in the fall when students prepared for whatever field they wished to enter. Those students who planned on attending college or some other post-secondary education first looked at college catalogs supplied by the guidance office.

The interested student then scheduled a college day to visit the school, or, if lucky, met with a college representative who came to the school. A permission slip was filled out allowing the student to be excused from classes in order to visit the representative.

During the visit, an interview took place. The student asked questions over such subjects as programs offered, cost of schooling and financial aid. These visits provided the student a chance to find out about the school and the school got a chance to see prospective students.

Representatives scheduled visits in the fall for seniors and the spring for juniors and seniors. They came from specialty schools such as the Fashion and Art Institute of Omaha to community colleges such as Indian Hills Community College to universities such as the University of Iowa. representatives were from Iowa although some were from Missouri and other surrounding states.

Military representatives followed a similar pattern. The branches of military that visited ACHS included the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and National Guard.

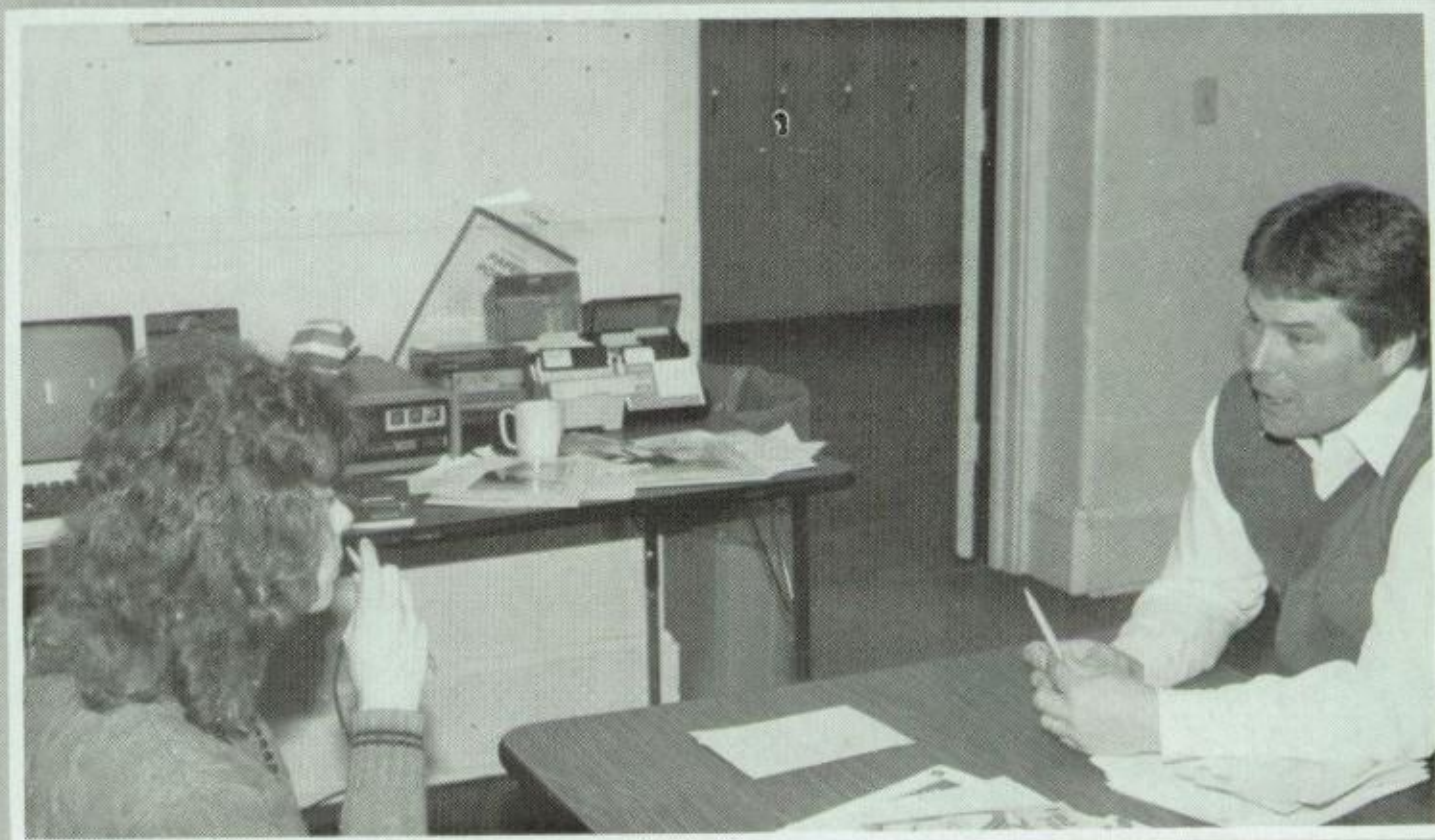

A week-long program in career exploration was presented in junior English classes with SFC Ron Downing from the National Guard who discussed financial and educational considerations for various careers as did Jeff Hotze from Buena Vista College who was a one-day speaker.

Feb. 7, 1986, Starflight, a band made up of Air Force personnel, presented a performance that allowed the Air Force a chance to meet with students on a more informal basis. A few students do enter the military from Albia High although not the number that choose a post-secondary education.

After a student visited with the representative he or she wanted to see, they made their choice. They could follow up on this by writing to the school or military base and finalize their decision.

SENIOR SONJA SWEE considers her choices as the Indian Hills Community College representative explains one of the many programs offered. Sonja plans to attend Indian Hills two years before transferring to Central College.

THANK YOU: For the gift of life you gave us all

After twelve years together, the class of '86 will soon be going their separate ways. Some to college, others to military service and some are planning to find employment here or surrounding areas.

Though we all plan on exploring those directions in our lives, we all have something in common. Our memories of the South Dakota trip, the Friday nights where everyone sat on the square talking with everyone else about what happened the weekend before, that memorable basketball game where Greg Brock made a three-pointer in the last few seconds, or just talking with friends during the five minutes of pasttime during school. We all have memories that are hidden in the walls of ACHS.

This past year many of us shared a very sad memory. The loss of a classmate and a friend. Greg Wright passed away Sept. 7, 1985 in a drowning accident. Most of us will never forget that day.

After the news, people were sitting in their cars on the square talking, but something was different. People were not only mourning, but smiling and carrying on conversations. They weren't sharing only the sorrow of losing Greg, but the memories he left us with.

As time went on, more memories were shared between classmates and

DEDICATION

The Rose Still Grows Beyond the Wall

Near a shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.

As it grew and blossomed fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall,
Through which there shone a beam of light.

Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride.
It followed the light through the crevice's length
And unfolded itself on the other side.

The light, the dew, the broadening view
Were found the same as they were before;
And it lost itself in beauties new,
Breathing its fragrance more and more.

Shall claim of death cause us to grieve,
And make our courage faint or fall?
Nay! Let us faith and hope receive:
The rose still grows beyond the wall.

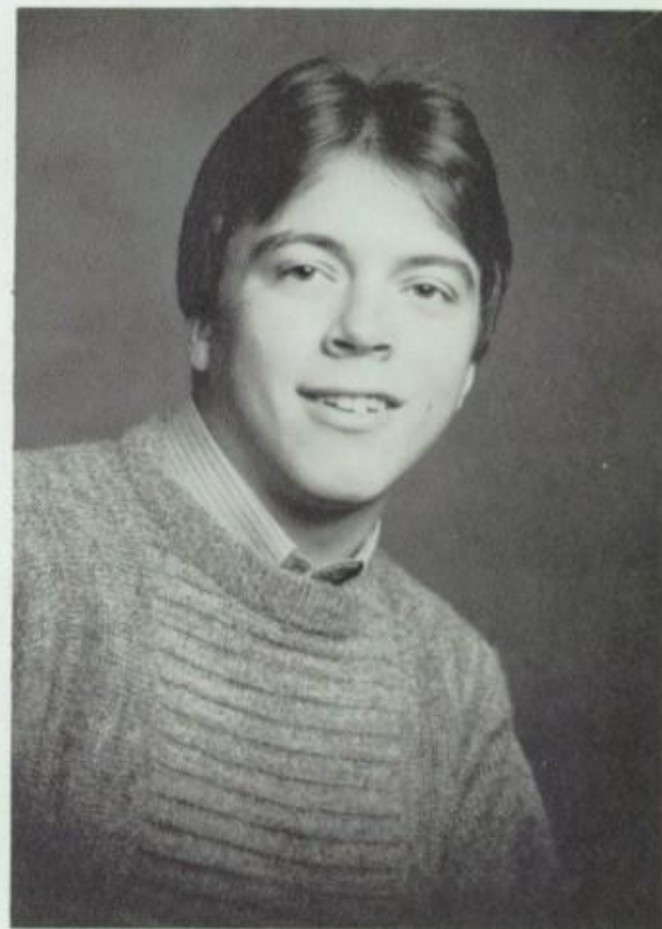

Scattering fragrance far and wide,
Just as it did in days of yore,
Just as it did on the other side,
Just as it will for evermore.

—A.L. Frink

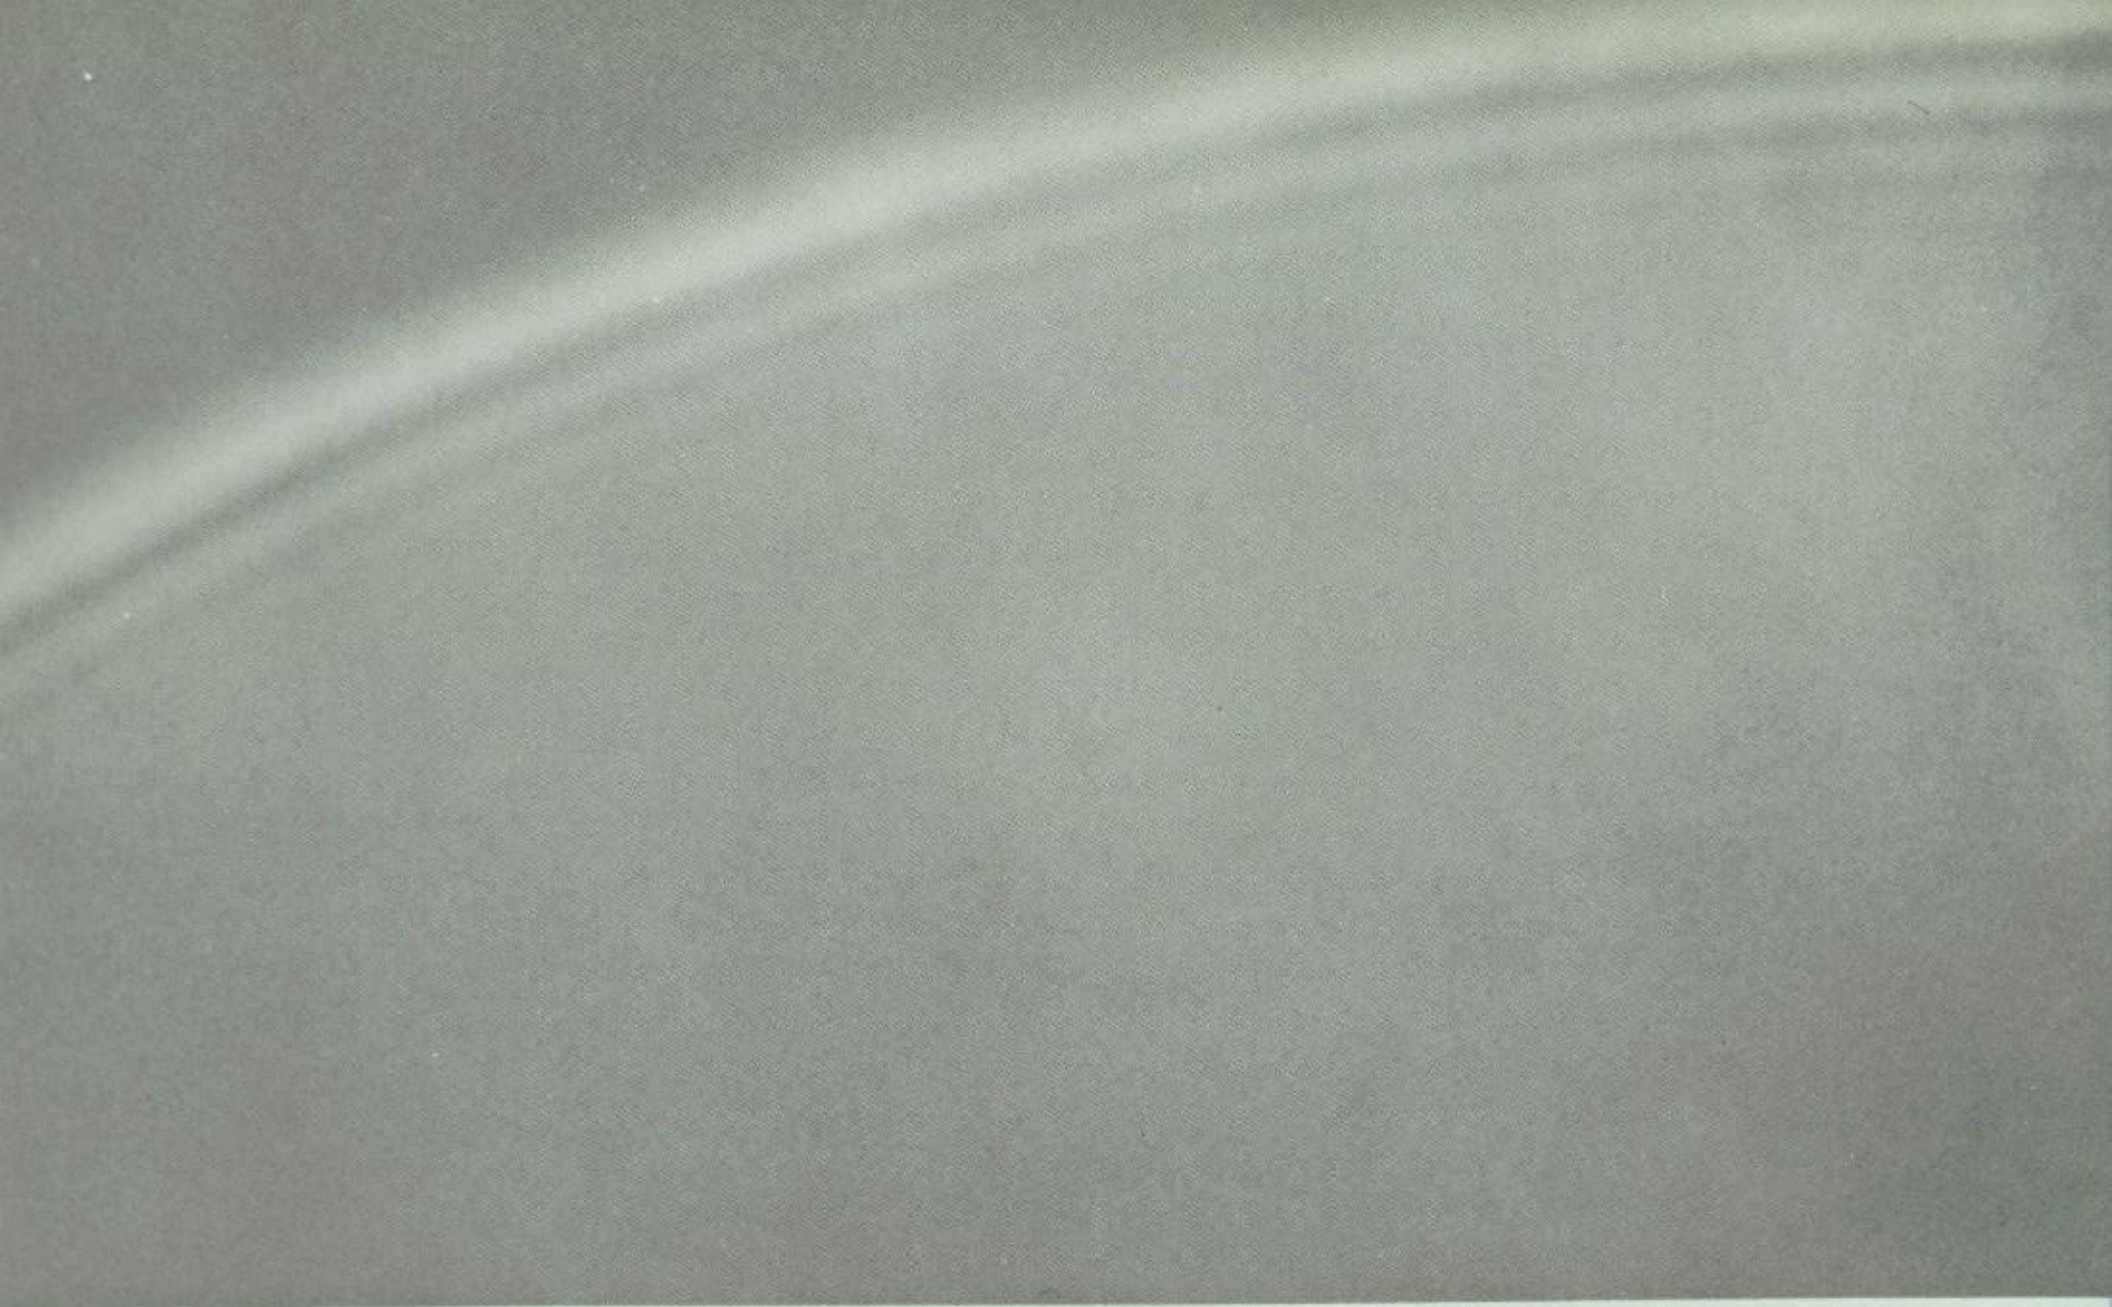

friends. There was always someone to talk to and share a good memory or to lend a shoulder for a hug.

Leber promotes March Madness, Walter welcomes $4,000 scoreboard, Rekemeyer plans menu for 300 pounds of beef, Collins replaces vandalized windows

Real workers keep things running smoothly

Students filled the hallways and teachers dominated the classrooms, but the real workers of the high school were behind the scenes, making sure everything was running smoothly.

Principal Al Leber and Vice Principal Doug Walter were responsible for the scholastic and disciplinary climate of the school.

An idea to promote better attendance was implemented by Leber, March Madness, which paid money to 10 students who maintained perfect attendance throughout the month.

Students were issued checks in the amount of $12.50 in an afternoon assembly prior to Easter vacation. A total of $125 was placed in the fund during the month-long attendance campaign.

Leber also was pleased at the increased effort on the part of the student body concerning the ITED (Iowa Tests of Educational Development) results.

That effort was one of many reasons students ranked higher on the tests, said Leber, who provided a free malt for each student as a reward.

What did not please the administration were the several acts of vandalism during the year.

Twenty-three windows were broken out of the 1912 section of the high school Feb. 21 and bricks were thrown through three large windows in the weight room the following night. Total replacement cost was approximately $1400.

SINCE STARTING DATE for the 1986-87 school year was pushed back to after Labor Day by Iowa law, Superintendent James L. Mitchell works on the 179-day calendar at his office.

On the weekend of Feb. 15, nearly $1000 in equipment was stolen from the music room. And on Dec. 13, several windows were shot out following a basketball game.

Two rewards were offered by the administration to find the guilty parties and help prevent further acts. The music department equipment was located by the Albia police department as were the culprits.

As athletic director, Vice Principal Doug Walter welcomed a new $4,000 scoreboard, partially funded by Coca-Cola Company to replace the one in use for 20 years and the two-story cement pressbox.

Organized by Walter and Leber, the construction of the larger structure over the summer as well as many of the materials were donated, keeping the final costs between $13,000 and $15,000.

System-wide foods director Phyllis Rekemeyer planned and organized daily menus in addition to ordering and maintaining supplies and providing meals for various organizational functions with the help of her staff of five.

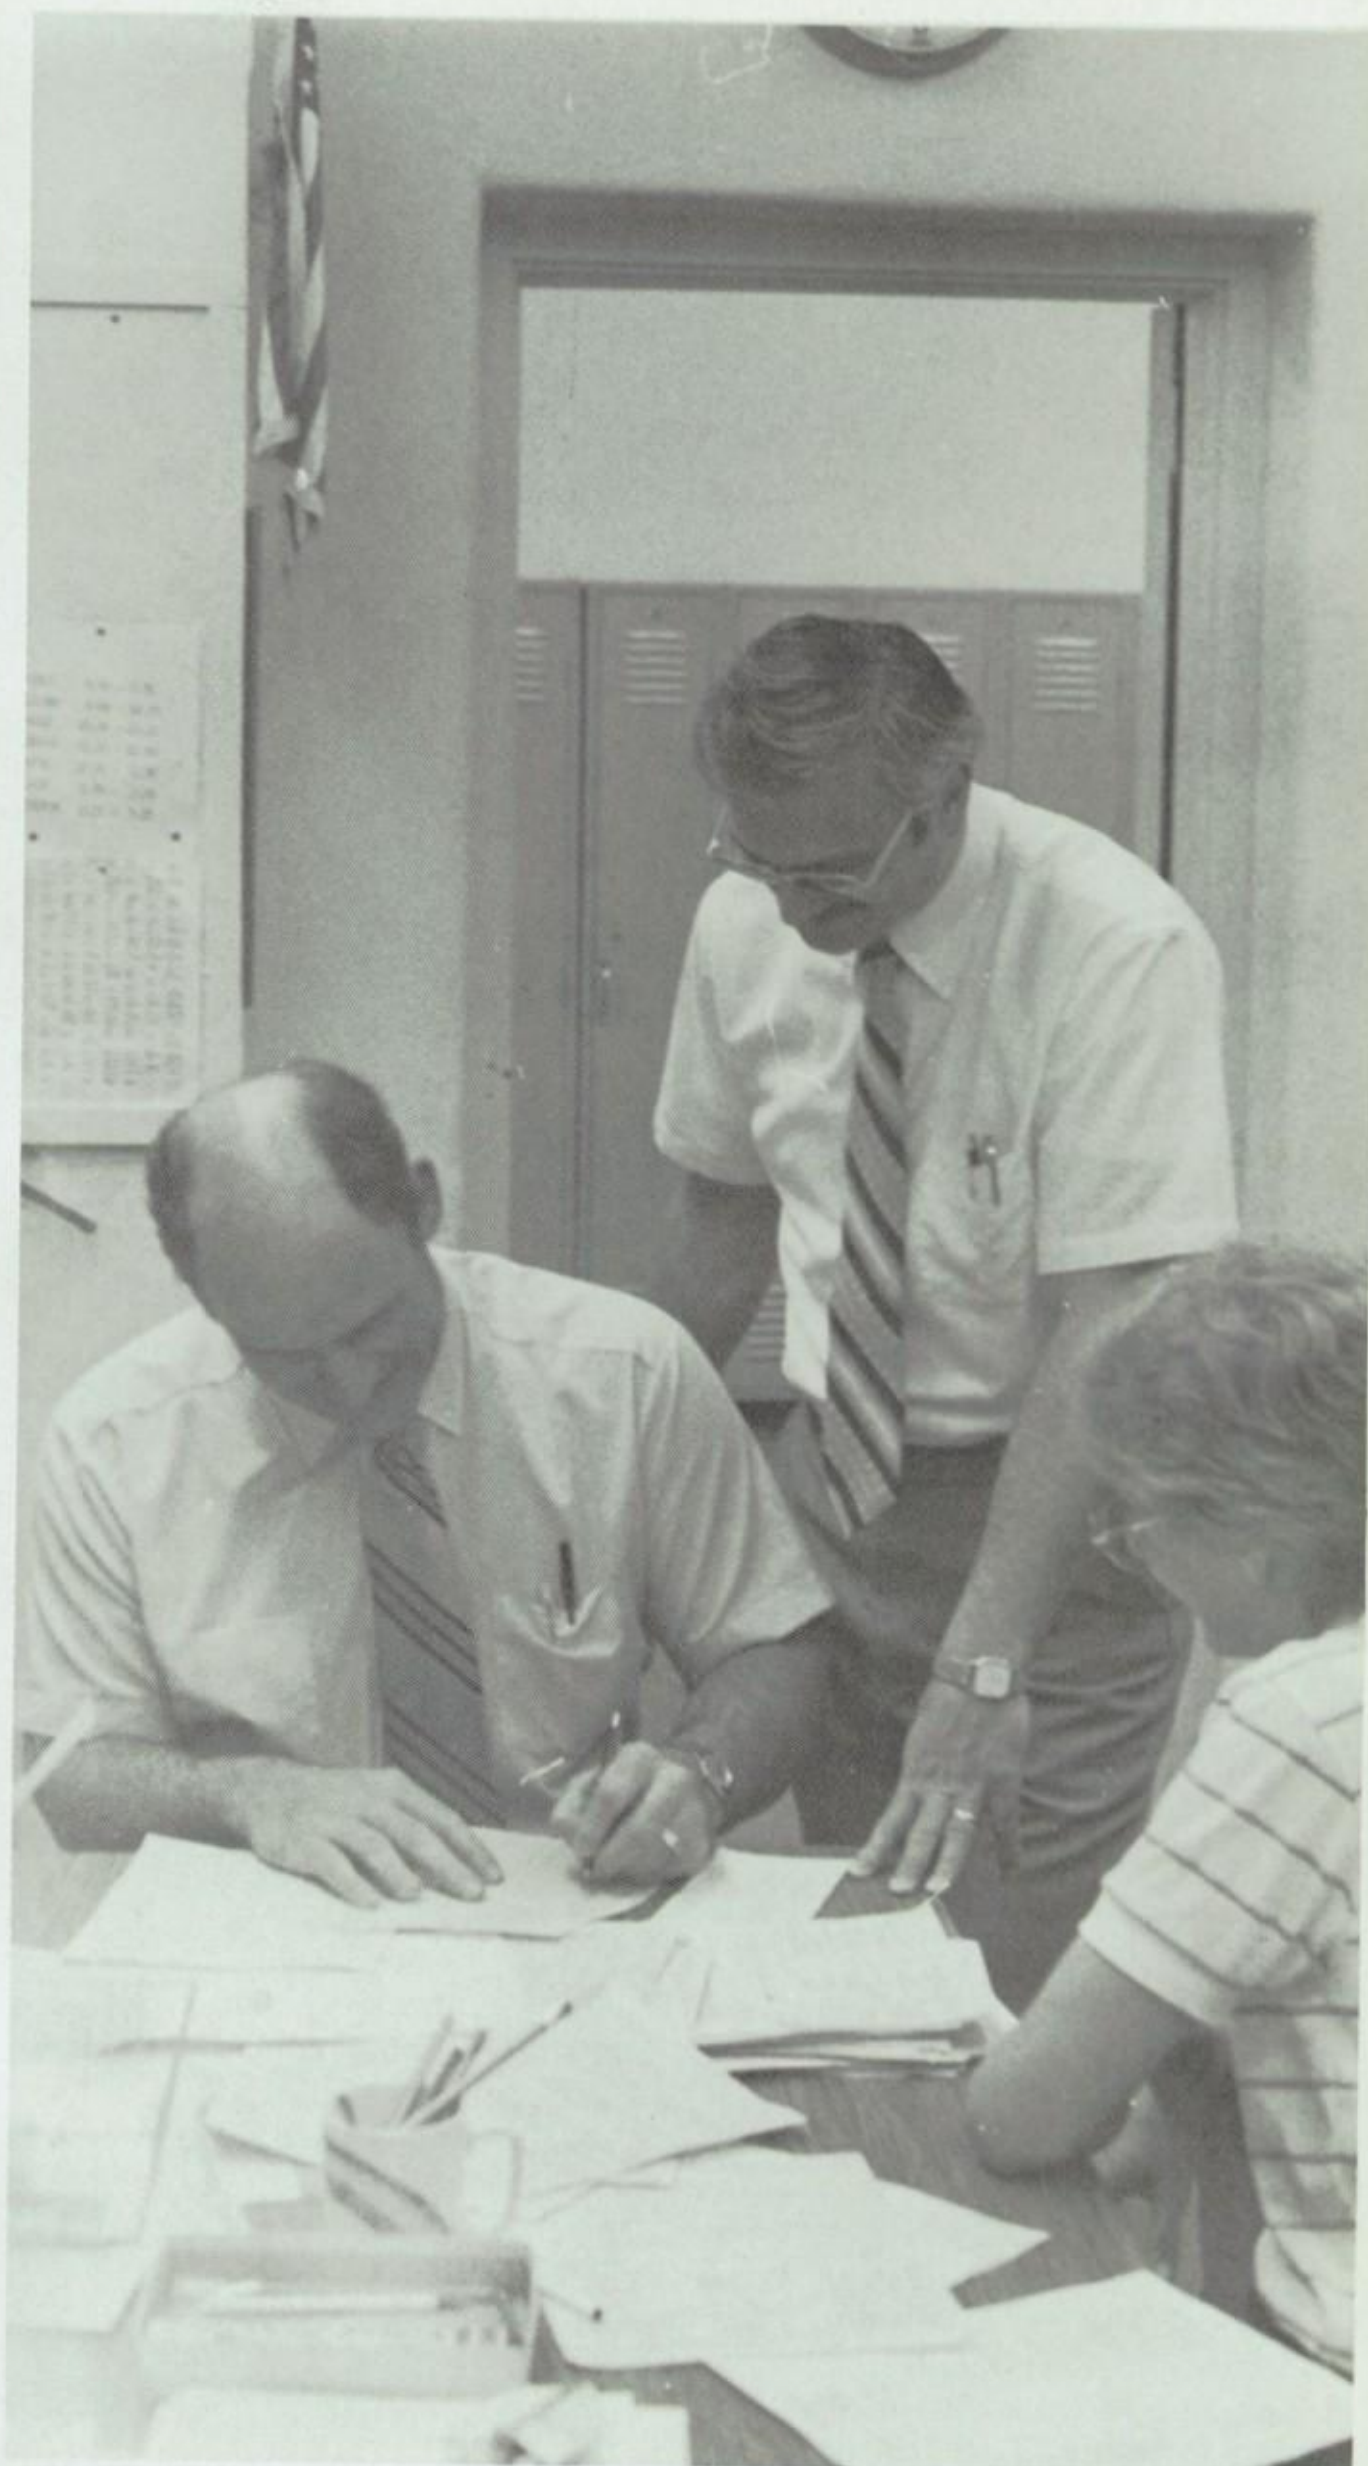

During May's Beef Month, Mrs. Rekemeyer assisted the Monroe County Cattlemen and Cow Belles in planning a menu for the 300 pounds of roast beef donated to the seven area schools.

Cattlemen Joe Pearson and Dea Stocker served 302 people in the high school lunch line and approximately 1,100 in the area.

Headed by Charlie Collins, the high school's custodial staff replaced a boiler and vandalized windows and kept up the maintenance of the high school facility.

Maintaining a 1912 structure was no easy task for Collins and crew who had to constantly remove falling plaster from suspended ceilings in order to prevent any fire hazard.

The day is never done for everyone from the superintendent to the night watchman.

Speaker warns we have drinking society

Guidance counselors Hjalmer Lindberg and Roger Cox used various methods to aid the students in planning a career of his or her choice.

To accomplish this goal, counselors arranged for guest speakers in the required English courses to provide information on college, job opportunities, resume writing and career exploration.

The best part of the job," commented Lindberg, "is helping the students plan their careers after high school."

Other jobs of the counselors included scheduling ITED's, PSAT's and other tests throughout the year in addition to making sure those juniors and seniors wanting to take ACT tests had the opportunity to do so.

Also providing guidance was a newly formed student group, SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk).

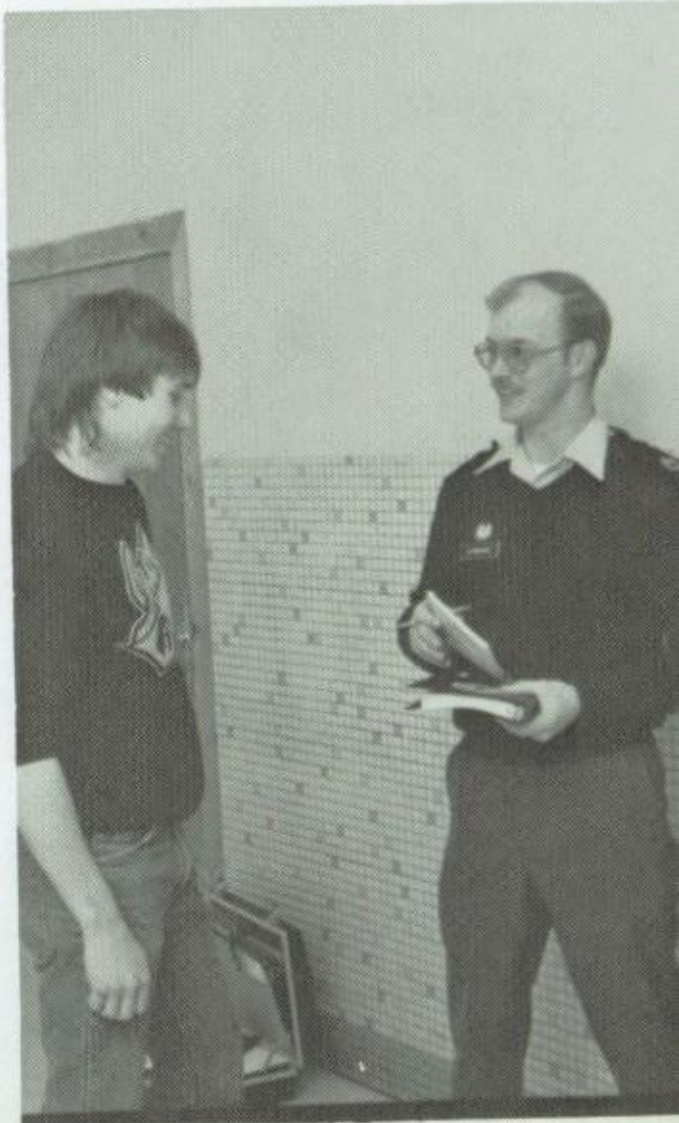

According to sponsor Peg Haluska, the purpose of the SADD chapter is to help save student lives and the lives of others and to educate students concerning the problems of drinking and driving.

The program hopes to increase the public awareness and get the public involved, said President Janet Carter. "We have experienced death in Albia due to accidents involving drinking and driving and, through public awareness, hope to reduce the number of drinking fatalities in our area."

A parents' night held in April was attended by approximately 25 parents and students. It was a slightly smaller number than indicated by the larger student attendance at meetings, but enough for a beginning, said Mrs. Haluska.

Speaker and Fairfield SADD sponsor Curt Hanson told those in attendance parents need to recognize that today's students have inherited a drinking society and need to learn to cope with this type of environment.

IN THE SPRING, guidance counselor Roger Cox arranged for military recruiter SFC Ron Downing from the Iowa National Guard to speak to junior classes about career exploration. Downing discusses this with junior Roger Showers.

Home economics instructor Avie Gorman joined the staff replacing Kathy Besco in housing courses which Miss Gorman felt provided students projects for learning.

Before anything took place in the classroom, everything was discussed. For example, the mock wedding in family living didn't get underway until county attorney Annette J. Scieszinski and Oskaloosa Bookin jeweler, Gary Ware, presented pertinent information.

In addition to her classes, she also helped with FHA as co-sponsor with Margaret Mordan. A former FHA member herself, Miss Gorman enjoyed the yearly activities, particularly seeing local officer Susan Mordan voted in as state vice president at the March 25 convention in Des Moines.

Velma Reed and Peggy Peterson, in addition to the two sponsors, also attended the state convention where the organization was celebrating its fortieth year. To take part in the celebration, Mrs. Mordan said the Albia chapter joined with other FHA groups in supporting the Missing Children Organization.

Singles living and ninth grade home economics made up Mrs. Mordan's schedule along with courses in foods. Mrs. Mordan stressed to students since they were going to be living on their own some day, they should know how to cope.

In foods and modern meals, both instructors discussed what food were good for the consumer and diseases which could be caused by too few or to many foods. Freshman home economics also taught students to be prepared for life in the areas of cooking, sewing, etc.

Something noticed by both the teachers was the increase in male class members. Miss Gorman felt that boys were beginning to realize that home economics was not just for girls, a philosophy Mrs. Mordan shared.

Industrial arts students, FFA members kept the road hot as they attended conventions and visited factories, plants to gain 'on-the-site' knowledge

Chariton, Albia share vocational ag teacher with pleasing results

Traveling time was well spent for the industrial arts and vocational agriculture students as several classes learned techniques and skills on the work site and FFA (Future Farmers of America) members viewed various procedures in several outings.

Traveling was also familiar to vocational agriculture instructor and FFA adviser Kevin Grieme who divided his day between Chariton classes in the morning and Albia classes in the afternoon.

Principal Al Leber said the arrangement came about because both communities needed a part-time instructor.

Early in the year, Grieme accompanied his six FFA officers to the Kansas City national convention in November to hear Secretary of Agriculture John Block as guest speaker and viewed over 250 career booths, leadership workshops and livestock shows.

Although Albia's chapter failed to qualify for state competition at the March 8 district convention, sophomore Bill Belzer was elected district treasurer. Part of his duties involved serving on the courtesy core at the April state convention in Des Moines.

Bill plus the other six FFA members and Grieme listened to FFA national vice president, Robert Weaver, ex-pro football player Dan Clark, actor Fred Grande who plays Gopher on "The Love Boat" and retiring state vice president and former Albia FFA officer, Scott DeTar.

Industrial arts students also kept the road hot as classes visited factories and plants and eighth graders made a daily journey to the high school to take woods and metals classes.

George Mackey and Jerry Mason each taught a woods class while Richard Bartels taught metals. The classes switched at semester. The approximately 50 eighth graders made the trip sixth and seventh period because the middle school did not have available the well-equipped shop facilities of ACHS.

Although new instructor Randy Martin was stationery during the week, travel occupied some weekends as his wife, Jayne, remained in Redfield to teach second grade at a nearby school.

As Martin felt his students learned more from doing than listening, he used a great deal of practical application in his electricity, auto and power mechanics classes.

Richard Bartels' metals classes viewed several facilities including the Maytag plant in Newton, John Deere in Ottumwa and the Indian Hills Trade and Industry Building.

Computerization was often the topic of discussion as computers are becoming indispensable in the machinery field according to Bartels.

¿Hablan ustedes espanol? Parlez - vous francais? Do you speak Spanish, French? It's more than a language class

Taking a foreign language class under Janet Bridger involved more thanenses and conjugations. Language study included learning cultures as well as learning verbs.

when Mrs. Bridger's Spanish classes created pinatas out of paper mache while French students whipped up crepes.

When All Saint's day came around, both the Spanish and French students cooked up some authentic Mexican or French dishes in the cooking lab.

But not all the activities were carried out at school. During November the Spanish classes travelled to Des Moines to see a Spanish play while the French classes heard a French version late that month.

On Nov. 18, foreign language students and four foreign exchange students attended the International Educational Conference Fair at Oskaloosa William Penn College where they learned about different cultures around the world.

Continuing that theme of togetherness was International Awareness Week which seemed to get everybody involved with a school lunch menu written in the language of the particular dish. The week's festivities also included a scavenger hunt and an International Awareness Week contest where students studied and reconstructed flags from around the world.

All this activity covered a lot of ground, but was not the only opportunity to explore. International club attended foreign festivals, celebrated the holidays with a trip to a haunted house in Des Moines and a scheduled Christmas party with pizza and a movie.

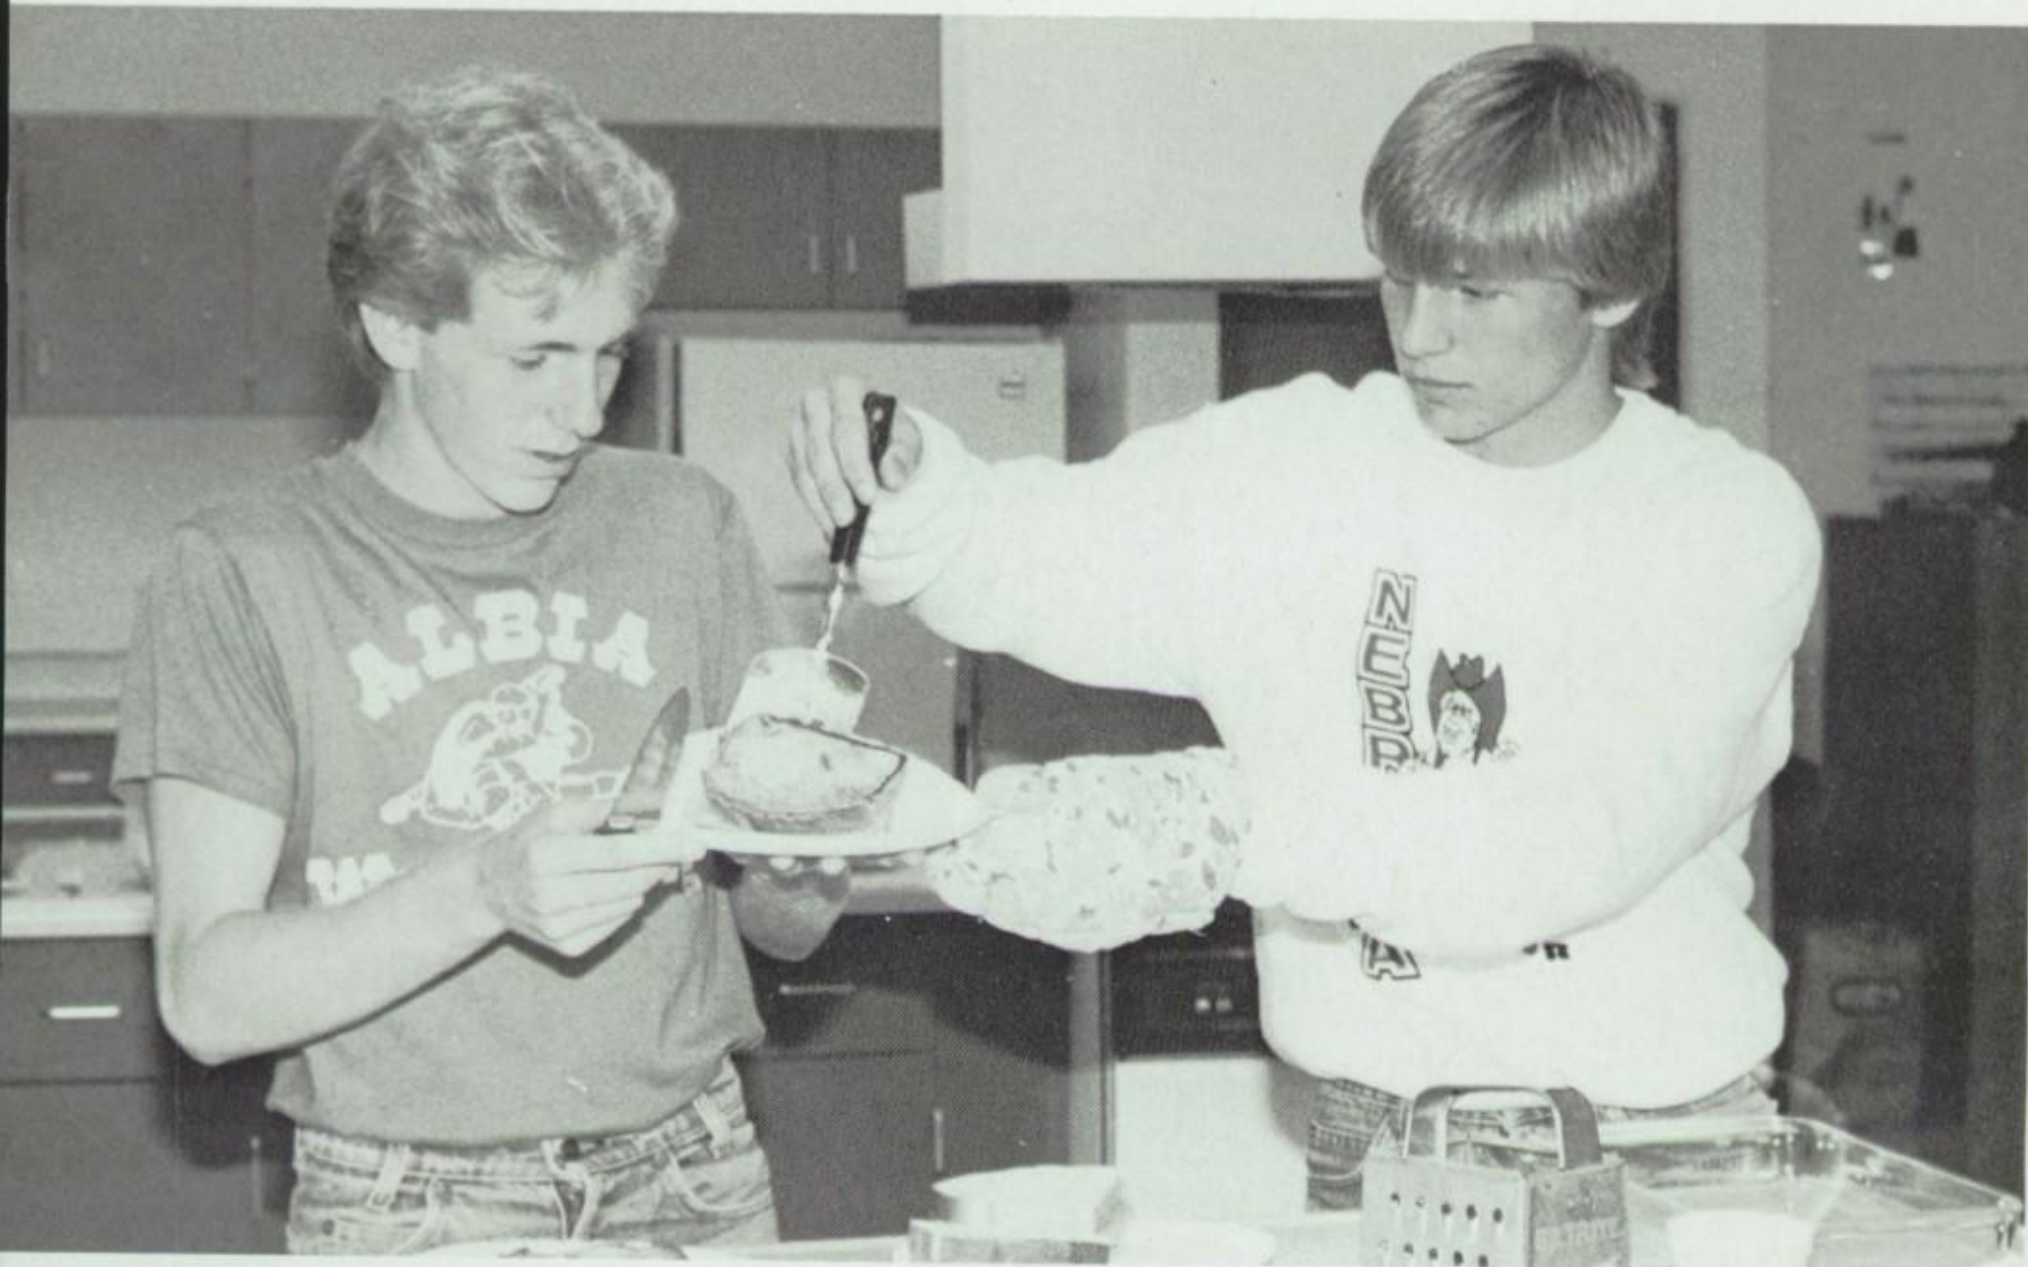

Some of the girls in International Club, along with some SES members, attended a Women's Career workshop in Ottumwa, March 8. The workshop gave them a chance to explore the different careers and talk to some of the professionals in those areas.

According to foreign exchange student Adriana Loaiza who has had two years of English, "Those who learn a foreign language share an understanding and open better communication with different cultures."

Speaking, writing skills strengthened in related clubs

Logical outgrowths of English and literature were speech and drama which seemed to have an overlapping membership of students. Many of the students that participated in speech were also active in the closely-related drama club.

Students chose one or two individual and six group categories for speech competition. After the topics were chosen, research was conducted. Then the speeches were rehearsed and improved upon.

Junior Susan Mordan captured first place in the American Legion Oratorical Contest. Junior Peggy Peterson was second, senior Sonja Swee placed third, and junior Curt Rhine was fourth.

Susan went on to represent Monroe County in the 5th District Oratorical Contest and was named second-place finisher.

Albia's only entry to the group contest was a one-act play which received a rating. The all-female cast consisted of Tabitha DeMoss, Andrae Cardenzana and Julie Sinnott.

At district competition in individual speech, Roger Showers, Brian Eilander and David Albers received II ratings.

Advancing to state competition, Sonja, Julie, Curt and Joanna Regenold all received I ratings. At state Sonja and Curt both received I ratings while Julie and Joanna earned II's.

Speaking skills also played a major role in literature classes as presentations were often a part of the student's grade.

Students in Kay Celia's world literature classes were assigned oral presentations on various aspects of Navajo traditions or their contributions to the United States. Matt Sarver was one of several students who constructed a small replica of a Navajo dwelling place or hogan, complete with smoke through a chimney.

In advanced American literature taught by Marlene Sprouse, students gave presentations throughout the year over the authors, works and time periods being studied.

The English classes, in conjunction with the guidance department, also offered work in career exploration such as Matthew Foster's two-week unit with the CISI (Career Information System of Iowa) computer program. Foster said his classes spent approximately one week of class time discussing careers and education before he gathered five of the school's Apple computers for a four-day computer application.

Following the workshop, the freshmen were to present to the class two careers they had investigated along with additional research.

Mrs. Sprouse and Vicki Stuchel's American literature classes also incorporated a career unit into their instruction along with resume writing.

Throughout the year, students dramatized the play "Our Town" and read "Huckleberry Finn" along with other American classics.

AN ADDITION TO THE FACULTY was American literature instructor Marlene Sprouse who joined Vicki Stuchel, Kay Celia, and Matthew Foster in the English department.

 top sellers.

The staff also learned business skills
 when they contacted Albia merchants

 two campaigns.

The year for the annual staff started

Legion sends five to Boys, Girls State

Practical application of skills learned in government and psychology classes was put to use by student council members who spent some of the year writing ammendments to the student handbook.

Members had voiced a concern early in the year over discrepancies between the handbook rules and teacher procedures.

Principal Al Leber attended the year's last meeting to commend council members for their work and told them most changes submitted would probably be approved.

Leber was also pleased with the academic letters proposal for the fall of 1986. Any student carrying a B average or better for four semesters will receive an academic letter with a bar for every two semesters after that.

In the fall and spring of the year, council members painted the trim of the 1959 edition at the request of Superintendent James Mitchell with a $1,000 payment at the end of the project. The group will enter that project into Iowa Community Betterment's competition.

Two programs designed to better educate high school boys and girls in the operation of state government met in June.

Boys and Girls State, sponsored by the American Legion, involved all participants in "creating and operating a simulated state" with participants given executive, legislative, county and municipal positions.

Attending Girls State June 7-14 on the campus of the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls was Peggy Peterson with Karen Gutcher selected as alternate. The boys group, which met at Camp Dodge in Des Moines, included Roger Showers, Bob Sinclair, Kent Hulsey and Curt Rhine.

Another example of role-playing was found in Graham Quinn's advanced history class during a reliving of the post-Civil War period.

The 14 class members were divided into sections representing the north and south and asked to recreate and resolve the problems encountered by those dealing with the reconstruction period following the Civil War.

Students soon realized that making a decision involving such diverse groups required a close analysis of all parties.

Decision-making and the variables that effect it were also discussed in Charles Mordan's psychology classes along with what influences the learning process and the different environmental factors that influence behavior.

INSTRUCTING in the social studies and psychology department are Bob Johnson, John Casebolt, Graham Quinn and Charles Mordan.

Courses in business and math offer practical experience through computer training, packet simulations, guest lectures and math competition

Murphy, Sinclair take medalist at contest

Teaching the many skills that it takes to be successful in today's economy, courses in business and math offered practical experience in everything from working in an office situation to figuring income tax returns.

Guest speaker Ron Northup from Indian Hills Community College explained various job descriptions and recommended anyone interested in pursuing a career in computer technology to take bookkeeping, mathematics, business courses and communication classes in addition to computer courses.

Northup also suggested developing good study habits and stressed motivation, attitude and enthusiasm were essential as well as research in the career choice desired.

Practical experience was achieved in Ann Spurgin's accounting and office practice classes as students worked through two packet simulations. The Greenery, Inc. contained rough-draft form letters, purchase orders, invoices and memorandums while the Cycle Center simulation included a cash journal, a general ledger, an accounts payable and accounts receivable ledger and financial reports.

On the more traditional level, two students, freshman Anne Murphy and junior Bob Sinclair, were medalists in the Southern Iowa Math Day at Grinnell College, May 7.

Anne earned a second-place medal in the general math category while Bob placed fifth in the algebra II division.

Medals were awarded in the top five scores in each category including general math, algebra, advanced algebra and advanced math.

Joining Barb Mackey and Ron Hohneke in the department was Roland Forsythe from the middle school who switched positions with Mike Serterh. Forsythe, who views mathematics as a science that is used throughout life, taught algebra I, consumer math and essential math.

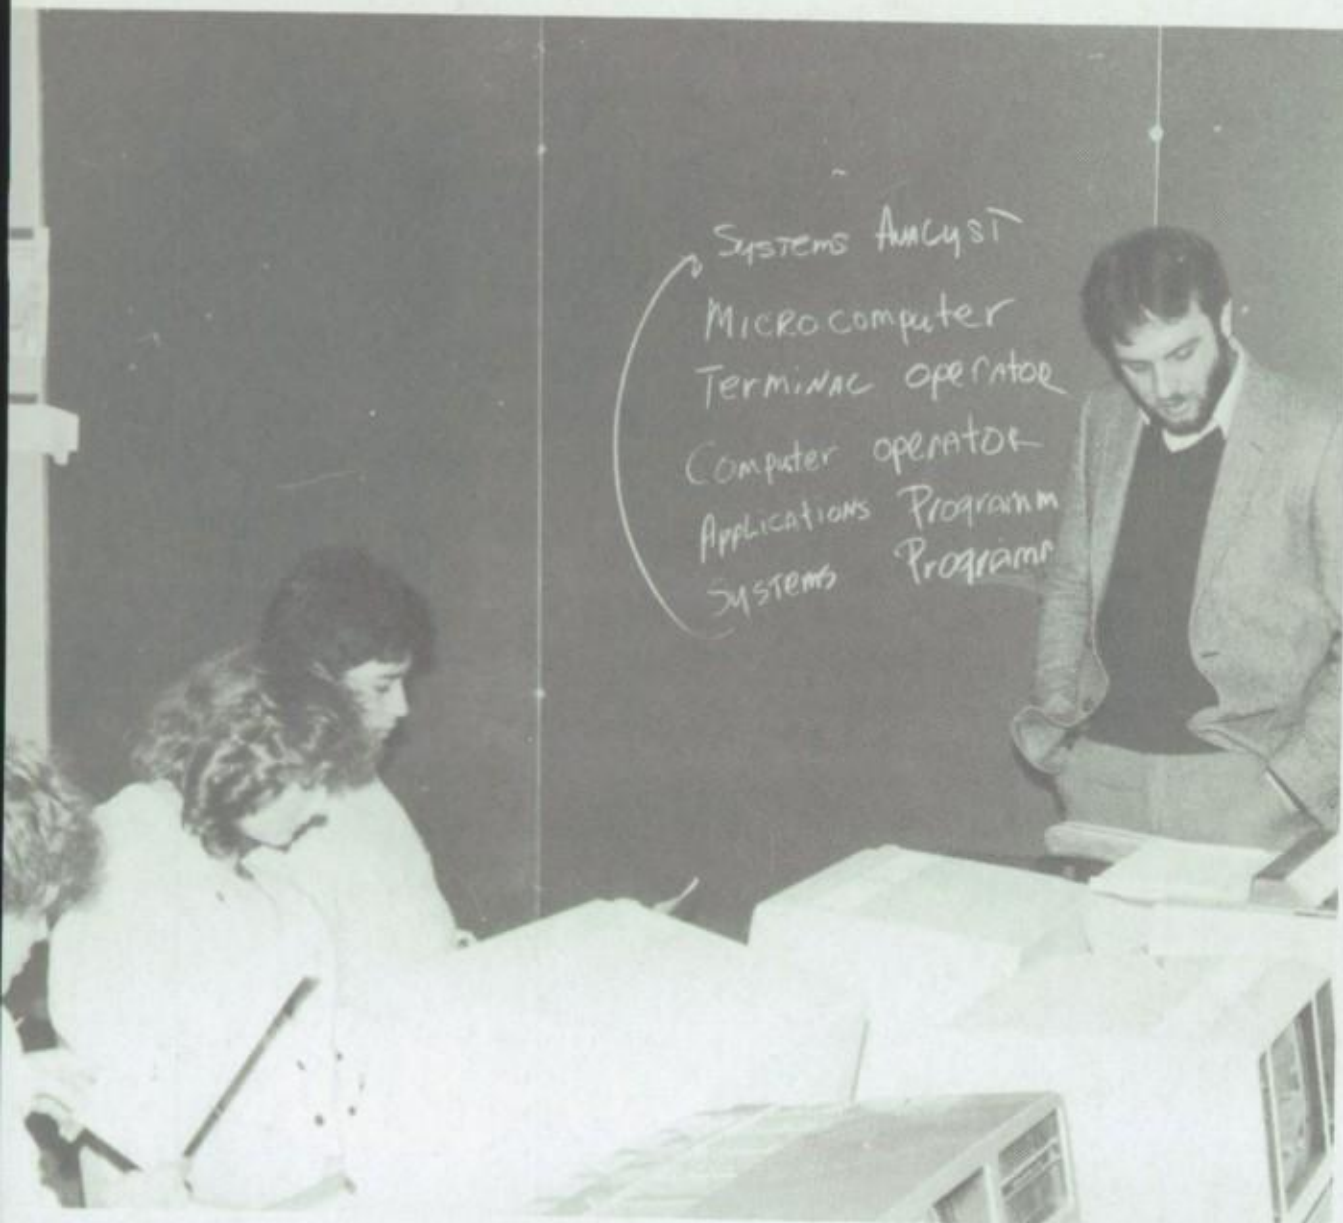

COMPUTER DIRECTOR Ron Hohneke, along with Barb Mackey and Roland Forsythe provide math instruction while Ann Spurgin and Elmer Lindberg teach the business classes.

PACKET SIMULATIONS such as The Greenery, Inc. offer business student Janet Carter practical experience.

COMPUTER STUDENT Denny Ransom uses the skills learned in programming class in other areas such as the CISI (Career Information System of Iowa) program in English.

BUSINESS COMPUTING is the topic of the day as Rich Northup, lead instructor in data processing at Indian Hills, informs Ron Hohnke's computer class of the current job market.

LEDGERS, financial reports and invoices can sometimes be a bit confusing to accounting student Jeff Van Polen so instructor Ann Spurgin makes a quick reference in the manual for verification.

GETTING DOWN TO THE BASICS with senior Mary Peterson as she begins to paint her ceramic vase during art class.

"Everyone has their own language in art," declared Mekca Wallace when asked, "What is most popular with art students?"

Connie Young, instructor and art club adviser, quickly added, "It's half and half. Some like the drawing and painting; some enjoy craftwork."

How did one get involved in art? Either through a friend relating how great the class was last year, a personal interest, or some gentle prodding by the teacher.

Mrs. Young tried to guide the first-year students, but as they advanced to second, third or fourth year, she liked to let them work on things they enjoyed doing.

Maybe that's why she had a 40-student membership in art club. Most of that number were quite involved as was demonstrated during the Christmas bazaar which raised nearly $1000 selling ceramic figurines.

Something that meant as much as money to art club members was student and community support.

Approximately one month of long hours, ranging from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. plus Saturdays, was required to prepare items for the November 9 bazaar which brought in many local residents.

With the points earned throughout the year, members worked their way to be included in the spring Kansas City trip where they toured the Hallmark Center and the Nelson Art Gallery, but because of bus trouble, were unable to make it to The Truman Library.

Time was always a premium for students and club members who kept up a steady chart through the year of "Mrs. Young help me!" or "Mrs. Young, you never help me!"

As they say, every student speaks a different language.

ANALYZED WITH CURIOSITY, seniors Dave Burgin and Norman Stocker observe wave propagation in a ripple tank in their second-period physics class.

DURING THE NOVEMBER CPR unit in SEL, freshman Melissa Griffin checks with freshman Shari Hannam before continuing the rescue procedure.

According to science teachers, labs give students a second check by allowing them to see the experiments rather than just read about them.

Labs supplement science teaching

Labs were used in all subjects in the science field because, as the three teachers agreed, students learned more from lab practice than from just studying the textbook.

However, labs take a lot of time and both Science for Everyday Living teacher Peg Haluska and biology instructor George Mackey stated that there was simply not time enough for the students to learn from labs alone. "Labs are a supplement," said Mackey.

Many labs in department head Margaret Gates' physics class came from a lab-book entitled PRISMS (Physics Resources and Instructional Strategies for Motivating Students) along with ideas taken from the textbook and a workshop she attended in Fort Madison.

In one of the approximately 55 physics labs, students were assigned to build toothpick bridges and test them with sand to see how much they would hold. One of the strongest bridges built by senior Norman Stocker supported 38 pounds.

In chemistry, Mrs. Gates got most of the 25 one-half period labs from the textbook. She feels that labs are better than "book studying as the students get to see the occurrences and get a second check."

Most of Mackey's labs came from a special lab manual or the textbook. A few (20-25) less labs were used in his biology class due to a lack of time and because he didn't want to center his teaching around labs.

Mrs. Haluska used approximately two labs per month in both her SEL and essential biology classes and got her ideas from various sources such as resource materials, other teachers and her "own lab ideas." She believes that students remember labs better than the material studied from the textbook, but stated that there needs to be a good balance between the two.

BEFORE CLASS, the science teachers of ACHS, Margaret Gates, George Mackey and Peg Haluska, organize their material for the day.

audio-visual skills.

Another area that can help future prospects is SLA (Student Librarians Association). Here students learned how to use the library and prepared college research. Librarian Doris Heslinga said that many students work part-time jobs in the school library while they attend college, and SLA is good preparation for that.

Officers of SLA were Sandra Kellogg, president; Karen Barnes, vice president; Laura Culbertson and Donna Gladson, secretaries, and Sonya Frazier, treasurer. Mrs. Heslinga voiced satisfaction with the students' work in SLA, but will be training new people as five seniors graduated in May.

A popular place to go when in study hall was, of course, the library. Mrs. Heslinga said the ACHS library can provide good material, and when asked if she still likes her job as much as she did when she came to Albia eight years ago, she answered enthusiastically, "Oh, yes!"

Helping others and themselves was goal for two groups concerned with educational services for students

Positive attitude helps in school, community

Two areas that taught students how help themselves and others were the special education classes and SES (Students for Educational Services).

Junior Dianne Nicoletto was named 1986-87 district president at the SES October meeting at New Sharon's North Dakota High School.

Attending the fall leadership workshop held at Camp Sunnyside were local vice president Julia Prather and Peg Peterson who held the office of publicity for the Albia chapter as well as the state communication position.

Camp Sunnyside, a camp for disabled and mentally retarded people from age six and older, was the year's state project in addition to raising funds for cystic fibrosis.

Self-sufficiency was a goal for students in Mary Sauter and Darlene Hardgrove's department especially through the Basic Career Education program.

The program, instigated by Mrs. Hardgrove and work experience instructor Pat Walters from Area Education Association, was designed for upper-classmen in multi-categorical classes who were doing well in both behavior and school work.

The four students involved in the three-year old program worked from one to two hours a day at a local business site four days per week for approximately five weeks. Mike's Blooms 'n Things, Hy-Vee, the Albia Day Care Center, Grant Elementary School and Pizza Hut were some of the businesses involved.

"Positive experience on the site," said Mrs. Hardgrove, "helped students to maintain a positive attitude toward school."

Physical education classes incorporate speakers, programs to supplement coursework in exercise and fitness

Two subjects offer students lifetime skills

Instructors and guest speakers spent a great deal of time informing physical education students rather than limiting the classes to physical activity.

Phyllis Faulks introduced a stress program using exercises to cope with such tensions as peer relationships, families and school pressures. Mrs. Faulks also emphasized that students didn't realize the full impact stress had on their health.

School nurse Charlene Crall, and Mark Wilson, a public health supervisor out of Chicago, discussed the increase in sexually transmitted diseases, how to recognize the symptoms and means of treatment.

Aerobic conditioning was also explored since, according to Mrs. Faulks, "many students have a misconception of aerobics."

Fuller student information was also the goal of a proposal to include car maintenance in driver education.

Principal Al Leber felt the training could be worthwhile, but questioned if there was sufficient time to incorporate such a unit in the course.

Driver education instructor Bill Sailor felt some students would really enjoy learning the basic skills of maintaining a car. Others wouldn't like the idea, but it would do them good anyway, he said.

Varsity letter club's main event was the October hog roast during homecoming. During the meal, letter winners took turns serving and accepting tickets for the meal which began at 6:30 p.m.

Four receive honors, recognition by Albia

Membership in National Honor Society which is based on four areas: scholarship, leadership, service and character, was given to two upperclassmen, Curt Rhine and Larry Kendall.

NHS members Jody Waters, Jeff Knupp and Norman Stocker spoke briefly about the four areas for consideration at the Feb. 26 induction. Then the two new members were asked to step forward to put on a robe representing acceptance into National Honor Society, and accept a stole symbolizing achievement in the four areas and a key representing the key to success.

After that, NHS sponsor Peg Haluska handed them a membership card to be officially inducted. Following the ceremony, a tea, prepared by Phyllis Rekmeyer and the cafeteria staff, was held in the library.

Three publications students were honored with Quill and Scroll membership at the publications banquet held Monday, May 13.

Curt Rhine, junior and business manager of the Echoes staff; Peggy Peterson, Echoes editor and also a junior; and senior yearbook editor Michelle Bunch joined the international honorary society of high school journalists for consistently outstanding performance on a publication.

Members must also be in the upper third of their class scholastically.

The Quill and Scroll cards and pins were awarded by Quill and Scroll representative Jack Dvorak from the University of Iowa who attended the banquet.

After 21 years at AHS,
Bonk leaves for Texas

Music number stays constant

Bonk, as he was known by teachers and students, "was not only a director who worked his musicians hard," said Jennifer Bettis, "but was also a friend to talk to." Under Bonker, the band has received top ratings 85 percent of the time with 11 I's and 5 II's for state marching competition. After a hard year of marching for halftime games, Lovilia, Octoberfest and homecoming parades, a II rating was received in October in state marching contest.

As soon as marching band practice was over, concert band rehearsal started in preparation for three major performances at Christmas, in February and during the spring. Bonker's last performance was May 17 at the commencement exercises.

With the 1986 students, Bonker taught a second generation of musicians. Five of his many students over the years have become band directors themselves.

His philosophy that everyone should be able to participate in high school music resulted in the percentage of music students remaining constant despite the drop in school enrollment.

Paired with first-year flag director Brenda Wynn, Bonker agreed with Mrs. Wynn that the year was a successful one.

"Bonk worked his musicians hard, but he was also a friend to talk to."

HONORED at the band dinner, director Leonard Bonker was presented with a Pepsi oil well for his move to Texas. Brenda Wynn also attended the April 25 banquet.

More male voices and sixteen

Make for an outstanding year

Having more male seniors in concert choir than in past years made the men's section really outstanding, according to instructor Paul Peterson. Concert choir was able to tackle more difficult material than previously.

Peterson, also instructor of mixed choir and affectionately known as "Pete," said "all the students made my day fun and exciting because they each gave 100 percent."

In his opinion, one of the best concerts of the year was the Christmas concert, Dec. 17. The students were out to prove to themselves and the audience, he said, that they could make their first performance as a group exciting and really make music together.

According to Peterson, the Albia High School choir is well respected by choirs from other schools and proved this at the fall vocal conference in Pella.

The choir's best performance of the year was given in the warm-up room at the vocal conference. It was an uplifting experience for both the choir members and for the instructor, said Peterson, but unfortunately, the performance area was in the Pella high school gymnasium, and the contest performance had problems with intonation because of the acoustics.

Excellent participation at small group contest resulted in 16 above-average ratings. Receiving I ratings were Dawn Simms, Ramona Knapp, Jon Jensen, Julie Gansman and Bob Sinclair.

Two musical groups promise top entertainment to audiences

Get the beat and celebrate!

"Entertainment's the key and that's what they'll see," said pops choir director Paul Peterson of the spring musical performances for jazz band and pops choir members.

April and May were busy months for the two groups as they performed for middle school and elementary audiences, put on the annual Swing Show May 8 and 10 and provided the entertainment for various groups.

A 25-minute segment for each musical group was presented to middle schoolers Wednesday, April 30, which included songs from the May Swing Show.

Earlier in April, pops choir completed an "elementary tour" when they performed seven songs for area children in grades one through four.

Jazz band members played at the FFA banquet April 7 and were rewarded with all the food they could eat.

In January, pops choir received one of the four top ratings given at state swing contest in Sigourney. A total of 20 schools participated with only four receiving I's.

Throughout the year, pops choir also performed for community groups such as Business and Professional Women, Delta Kappa Gamma, and the Moravia Swing Choir.

Feb. 6's Pops Concert was a way of wetting people's appetite for the May Swing Show, said Peterson and jazz band instructor Leonard Bonker.

The May 8 and 10 Swing Show marked the last performances of Peterson and Bonker together after 15 years as Bonker resigned his position for the 1986-87 term to leave for Texas.

WINNING provides a feeling of achievement for sophomore Troy Folkerts as the referee holds his hand up after a wrestling match at Albia.

BEING CHAMPS is a great feeling for volleyball players Brenda Clark, Michelle Flattery, Michelle Bunch and Anna Ford after taking first place at the Ottumwa tournament.

"GET SET, GO" says the starter as the Albia runners begin the race.

Quinn pleased with season outcome despite no girls cross country team

According to cross country coach Graham Quinn, "in order to be a good cross country runner, you must have three particular characteristics: an introverted personality, a lot of self-discipline and determination."

Albia Cross country runners ended their season with a sixth place in the South Central Conference. The team consisted of six main participants, Dan Sinnott, Larry Kendall, Tim Buol, Andy Sarver, Stacey DeTar, and Greg Brock.

Because of volleyball competition, there was no girls cross country team this year. Coach Quinn, however, was very pleased with the outcome of the season.

"There were no outstanding people on the team," said Quinn, "but four people ran the course within a minute of each other's time and, because of this, we had an exceptional team."

Having the four run closely together was an advantage according to Quinn. because points in cross-country are calculated by adding individual places with the lowest score winning. For example, only 30 seconds separated the top four Albia runners in the last meet at Grinnell.

The five-member team concluded its regular season with 89 points. Grinnell with 24 points captured the conference. Chariton finished second with 45 followed by Oskaloosa, 48;

Centerville, 54; Knoxville, 62; Albia 89 and Davis County last with 115 points.

The district meet at Williamsburg concluded the season with Albia finishing 12th out of 16 teams. In individual competition, senior Dan Sinnott led the Blue Demons with 43rd-place finish in 11:17.

"In order to be a good cross country runner, you must have three particular characteristics: an introverted personality, a lot of self-discipline and determination."

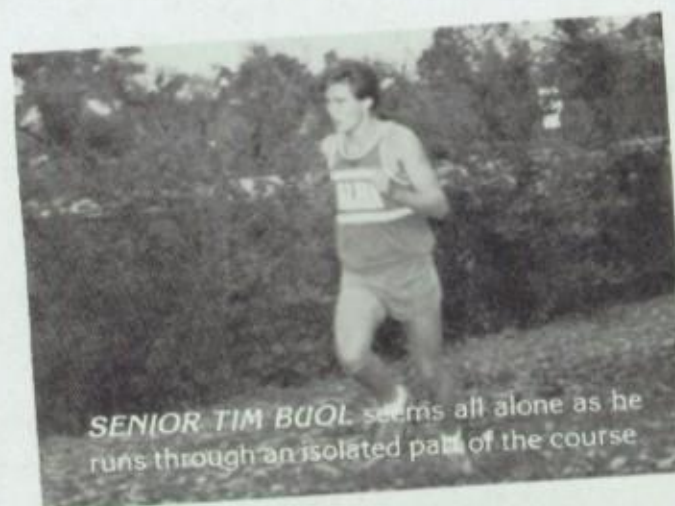

The close times again provided a good team effort according to Quinn. "We did better than we have done in the past," he said. "There was only a :13 spread between the top four runners."

The season was concluded with a banquet Nov. 18 at the Rathbun House.

A disappointing season???

After winning only one game during the season, it could be hard to be optimistic about the Albia Blue Demons, but there were some bright points according to head football coach John Casebolt.

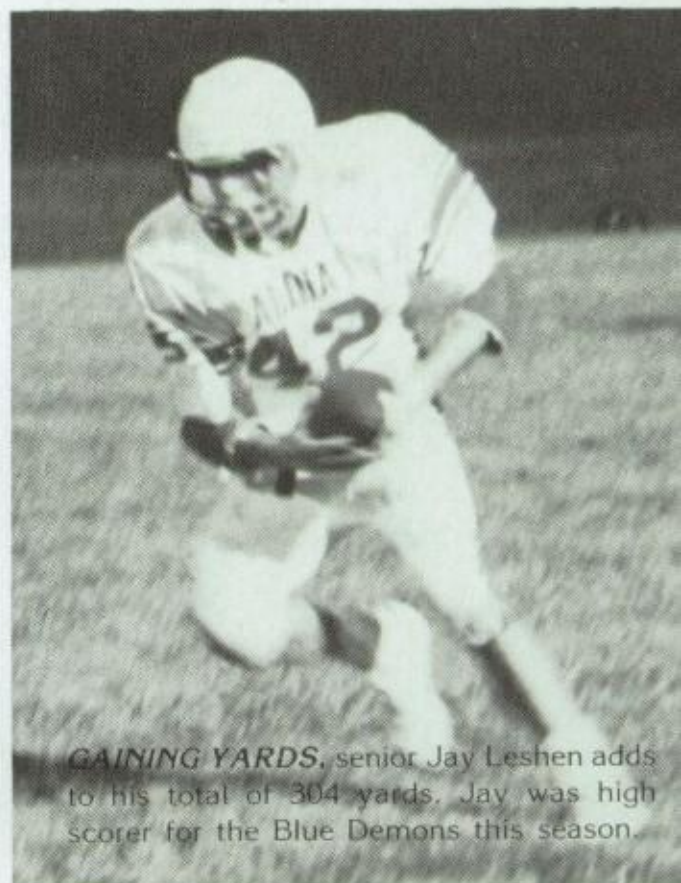

The Blue Demons had two members chosen for the South Central all-conference team as well as two members receiving honorable mention. Mike Lawrence, defensive linebacker and Norman Stocker, defensive lineman, were selected for places on the all-conference defense while Jay Leshen and Noland Johnson, both halfbacks, were selected for honorable mention.

Inexperience coupled with a strong conference resulted in what Coach Casebolt termed a "disappointing" year. Casebolt went on to say, however, that at times the squad played very well.

With sophomore quarterback Matt Sarver leading the offense, Albia scored a total of 52 points, averaging 5.8 points per game. Sarver and Leshen passed for 552 yards while Johnson, Leshen, sophomore Terry Braun and senior Harold Major ran for 1,527 yards.

Defense was the strong half of the Blue Demons. Allowing 20.7 points per game, Lawrence led the defense with 50 tackles, 11 of which were quarterback sacks. Senior Jim Bates led the defensive backfield with three interceptions. The opponents totaled 1,396 yards rushing and 613 yards passing, averaging 223 yards per game against the Albia defense.

At the banquet Thursday, Nov. 14, awards, letters and numerals were given to players. Jay Leshen won most valuable offensive player with Mike Lawrence winning most valuable defensive player. Most valuable player went to Norman Stocker with Noland Johnson cited as the most improved player. Mark Scieszinski won the Mr. Tuff award given in memory of player Richard Noe.

GAINING YARDS, senior Jay Leshen adds to his total of 304 yards. Jay was high scorer for the Blue Demons this season.

A TOUGH TIME was the least the Albia Blue Demons could call the season of '85; a season where nothing was for free.

Hustle helps!

The season of '85 was a tough one for the Blue Demons. The JV football team, under head coach Randy Martin, worked hard to move the ball but still ended up not winning one game. "This was tough on the kids," said Coach Martin, "but they never gave up. They always tried to win." The leader in passing was sophomore Jeff Carter with leading rusher Sam Decker. Bill Belzer, Jeff Carter and Eric Berry who as the leaders in tackles, made up the defense that was Albia's best weapon.

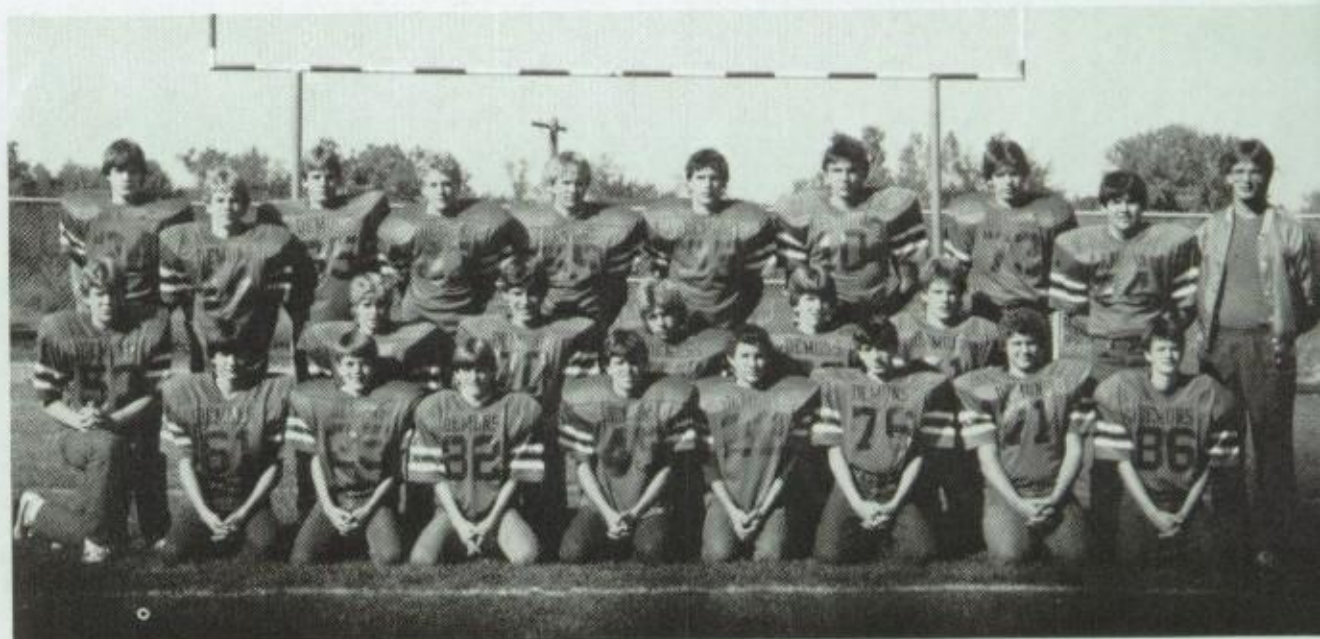

The freshman football team, according to Coach Jim Wynn, played hard and well even though they won only two games. All their contests were close as shown by the total score of 92 to the opponents' 83. Coach Wynn saw the defense as strong with the team's only weakness the small frontline. The leading rusher was Scott Bettis (407 yrd) and Albia rushed for a total of 1455 yards while they passed for 163.

JV volleyball coach Pat Pendergrass felt "reasonably pleased" with the season of 85. "The team's greatest strength was their number of good players," said Coach Pendergrass, citing Kim Hugen, Vicki McGee and Ramona Knapp. Pendergrass felt many of the sophomores had improved a great deal and their record of 5-7 and 7 ties was not bad.

A little tougher was the freshman volleyball season. With a record of 2-7, Coach Pendergrass was not completely satisfied. According to him, their biggest strength was the girls' quickness and desire. Shari Hannom and Michelle Gray were among some of the best players.

Squad reaches individual

Although the Lady Dee volleyball team ended the season with a game record of 44 wins and 38 losses, the squad placed five members in the South Central all-conference team.

According to four-year veteran Michelle Bunch, the team failed in their hope to finish first in the conference but was successful in reaching "individual goals." And, said senior Michelle Duer, we also had "fun playing" and "gave it all we had."

Cited as season leaders by Coach Pat Pendergrass, senior Lisa Flahive made the South Central Conference first team for the second consecutive year with Sherry Hollinrake voted as second team. Receiving honorable mention were Brenda Clark, Michelle Duer and Michelle Flattery.

"I don't think we played up to our capabilities," said Michelle Duer. "We had split a two-game match against Davis County at Ottumwa tournament and beat them in the conference match." Michelle Bunch characterized the team as "worn out" from season play.

Some fundamental skills such as serving and spiking were pinpointed as problem areas by Coach Pendergrass, but overall he was pleased with the girls' efforts.

According to Pendergrass, many people don't realize volleyball is a "fun" sport so they don't provide the emotional support that can mean extra points on the board.

ON THE ALERT, referee Brock Laws checks to make sure seniors Michelle Duer and Lisa Flahive execute a legal block.

Get The Fever!

According to Coach Doug Tuetken, "Keeping intensity throughout the game is one of the most important things to winning."

Demon fever burned across Monroe County as Dean Stocker, better known as Doc, led the cheering section at every boys basketball game. All the way from Grinnell to hometown Albia.

Starting with 14 and ending up with 12 players didn't change the goal of winning as the team placed second in the South Central Conference.

The Knoxville jinx was also finally broken after seven previous attempts when the score ended Albia 54, Knoxville 47.

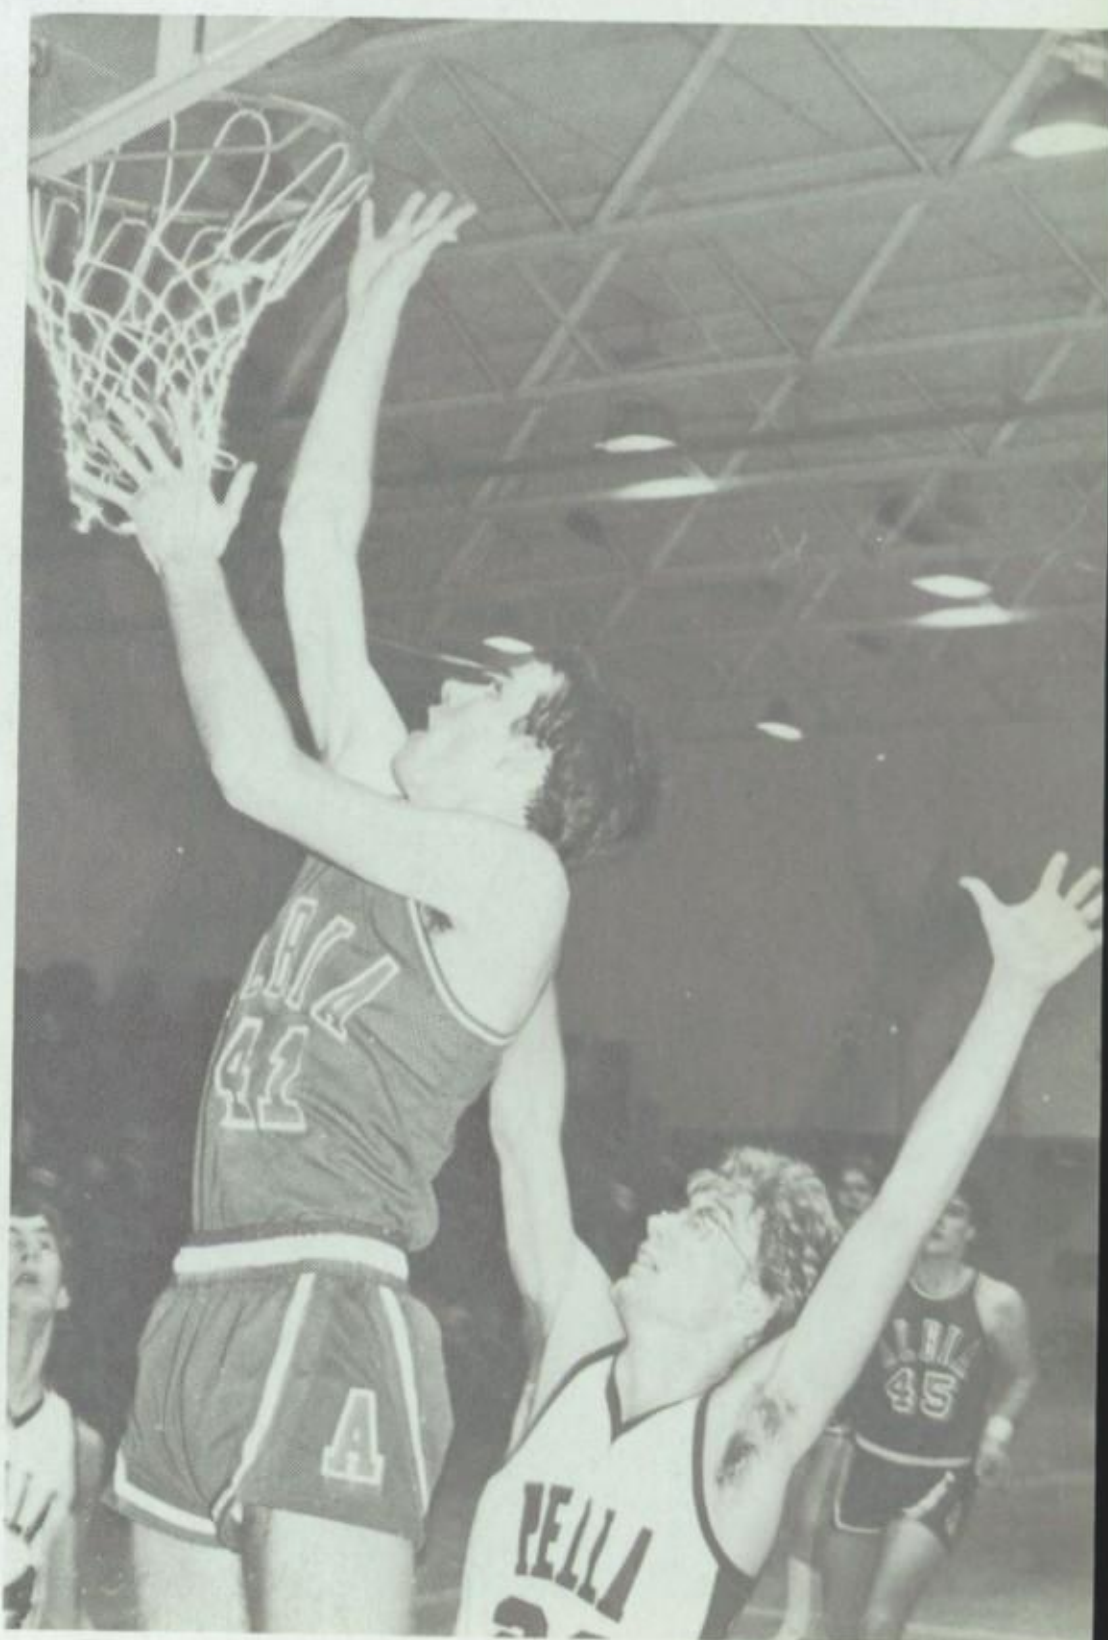

As the season progressed, senior Tim Nolan was sidelined for a couple of weeks with a knee injury, but later made up for lost playing time by receiving a second-team honor on the SCC team.

Albia's first team, all-conference choices Norman Stocker and Jeff Knupp, along with Nolan and junior Duane Steenboek, were among the conference leaders in scoring and rebounding.

Stocker emerged second in both categories with Knupp third in conference scoring.

In addition to being an SCC choice, Knupp also broke a school record for career free-throw percentages, sinking over 75 percent of his free throws in his two-year varsity career.

SLAM DUNK for senior Tim Nolan as he goes up for two in the Pella Christian-Albia game.

Improvements mark JV seasons

The underclass basketball team did well as far as improvement during the '85-86 season.

The freshman girls basketball coach Jean Manecke said, "The team did well in adjusting to my first year of coaching as well as their first year in high school competition."

She went on to say that everybody got a chance to play.

According to Ms. Manecke, the 4-7 record was a little deceiving and she was pleased with records that were tied or set during the season.

Amy Spurgin set a record in assists as well as Gina Della Vedova in steals. Jenny Freshwater tied a record in blocks and the team as a whole set a record in fewest points allowed by an opponent. Miss Manecke added that practically any of the girls could have started games.

The freshman boys team also had to adjust to a new coach in Randy Martin and the rigors of high school basketball. However, since Martin coached the freshman football team, he knew some of the players.

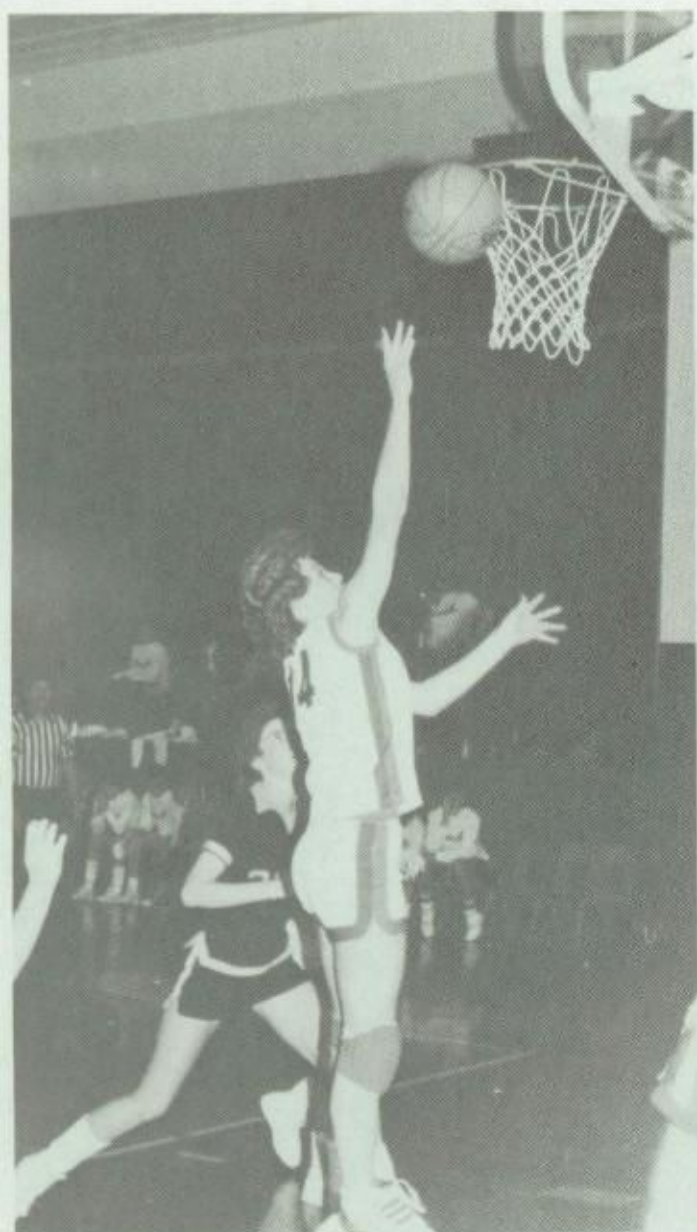

He said the team started out slowly for the first few games, but experienced a big winning spree before finishing against some tough teams. Martin added that they played well with some good potential, and he was very pleased with the freshman boys' defense. Most times they out-rebounded their opponents and it wasn't from an abundance of height.

The '85-86 sophomore girls team didn't play much on their own due to the fact that since too few players were on varsity, several sophomores had to fill in the slots.

The sophomore boys team played under the same coach as their freshman year, Jim Wynn. Wynn was glad to be able to give everybody a chance to get a lot of playing time.

He added that the team, as a whole, improved greatly throughout the season with Wayne Conway the most improved player. Overall, the sophomores out-rebounded their opponents but failed to outscore them to pull off the win.

Although the records failed to consistently prove it, the underclass squads did well developing as teams.

ON THE LINE! Angel Walter makes one of her many free throws in a game against Pella that adds to her season total of 28.

Three on SCC squad despite difficulties

With one win and 13 losses, the Lady Dees had what senior Karen Gutcher called "a mentally difficult year."

"Because of the lack of cooperation, the team just failed to work together," said junior Chris Lusch.

In an all-game record, the team received a 1-18 finish. Despite the lopsided win-loss record, several individual standings were high in the conference rating.

Karen Gutcher, an honorable mention choice on the South Conference all-conference team, ranked ninth with 49 points. She also placed eight in the conference list of defensive rebounds, totaling 35.

Sophomore Jill Wells followed Karen in the area of offensive rebounds, coming in seventh with 36 rebounds.

Sophomore Angel Walter was 14 on the list as she made 28 free throws out of 50 attempts.

Junior Robyn Rogers who was listed as first and second in the conference in the area of interceptions and defensive rebounds, respectively, was selected for the SCC second team. Sophomore Michelle Freshwater followed her in both instances, listing fourth and fifth and also received a SCC honorable mention.

The March banquet held some humorous awards for the Lady Dees when Vicki McGee received the brick shot award for the most misguided balls while the tape award went to the most abundant users, Robyn Rogers and Jill Wells.

The locker room MVP award which is a bar of soap went to Lynn Weldon, Mary Sciezinski and Michelle Freshwater.

Scholar athletes were Patricia Franzen and Karen Gutcher.

Even though the season was not a victorious one, Coach Dave Bahr said, "We hope that the experience and a year's maturity will help us become more competitive."

IN A NON-CONFERENCE GAME against Pella Christian, sophomore Jill Wells drives the ball to the basket.

Lack in uppers hinders season

"We were a young team," said Jerry Mason, head coach for the Albia Blue Demon wrestling team, of his fourth-place squad who tied with Davis County and ended with a 4-6 record.

Three all-time records were broken by senior Dan Sinnott. Included was most falls with 30, most takedowns at 77 and a record of 177 nearfall points.

Other records for this season were most wins, again Sinnott with 30; fastest fall, Marc Jones with 13 seconds; most reversals, Kerry Archibald with 25; most escapes, Jim Angran with 24 and most team falls, 194.

"We had two outstanding wrestlers," stated Coach Mason, referring to Albia's two state qualifiers, seniors Dan Sinnott and Larry Kendall.

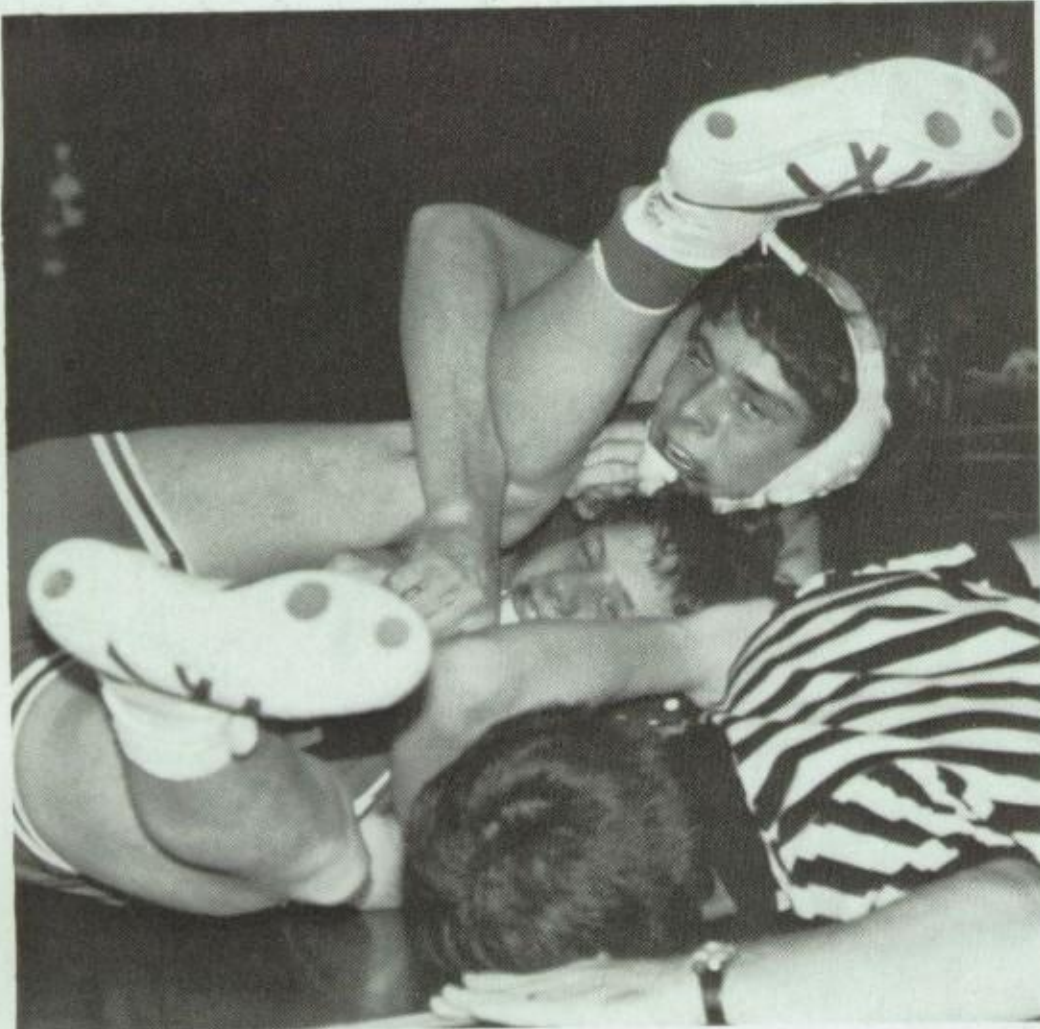

Dan went on to wrestle his way to a second-place finish in the 119-pound weight division.

Despite the stronger leadership shown by Sinnott and Kendall, Sinnott felt the season was not as successful as everyone expected it to be. "We needed upper-weight experience," explained Sinnott. "We had a weak dual team but a strong tournament team."

In tournament play, the Albia varsity wrestlers placed fifth at the Pella tournament, fourth at the Ottumwa tournament and took third at the Wayne tournament.

South Central Conference tournament competition at Grinnell placed Albia fourth with a second place at the Pleasantville tournament, third place at the sectional in Chariton and seventh place at the district in Norwalk. The season ended with a 21st ranking in Class AA championships in Des Moines.

Despite losing many of the team's heavyweights to graduation, in a couple of years, "they'll be a strong team again," predicted Sinnott.

Girls tennis had a young team with only one returning letter winner, senior Lisa Flahive.

Even so, Coach Mike Sertterh was pleased with the team's quick development and said that the girls improved considerably within a small amount of time. Senior netter Michelle Bunch said that since there were so many practices cancelled due to bad weather, a lot of girls went out and practiced on their own. And that probably aided in the team's improvement.

The girls lost several close matches during the season to end with a 1-9 record and sixth in the South Central Conference tournaments. They found themselves involved in four 5-4 meets, but only managed to win one.

On the boys squad, Dan Walker felt each of the team members made personal improvements which will help the inexperienced players as they move up to key positions.

The netters did, however, run into slump during the course of the season. According to Walker, the players found themselves at a low point about mid-season after having a strong start. Then with conference and sectional tournaments approaching, they came back to peak at the close of the season.

John Robnett said that if team members go out and practice seriously during the summer, they could be a worthy opponent in future meets.

Bates, Della Vedova lead golfers

"Pretty successful" was how golf coach Charlie Mordan summarized the boys golf season.

It didn't look too bright in the beginning of the season when Mordan lost his second golfer in Jeff Knupp, David Spurgin hurt his back, and a good freshman prospect moved away.

Despite this, the team did well, but Mordan said, that without the bad breaks, we should have won the conference and gone to state."

Senior Jim Bates lead the Blue Demon golfers with a low of 37 shot at the sectionals and an average of 39.1 and a low 8-hole round of 74 which he shot at the Chariton invitationals.

Second golfer David Spurgin had a low of 38 for the season shot at Davis County. He averaged 41.1, and his low on 18 holes was a 78 shot at the districts.

The team's strength, according to Mordan, was the consistency of the top three players, Bates, Spurgin and senior

Terry Coady. "The team worked very hard," said Mordan "but got second often."

Consistency was also the girls golf team's weapon. "This year there were many more in the 50's than in the past," said Coach Tom Preston.

He said that there had been great improvements during the season as evidenced by a record of 8-3 and a low of 213 against Centerville.

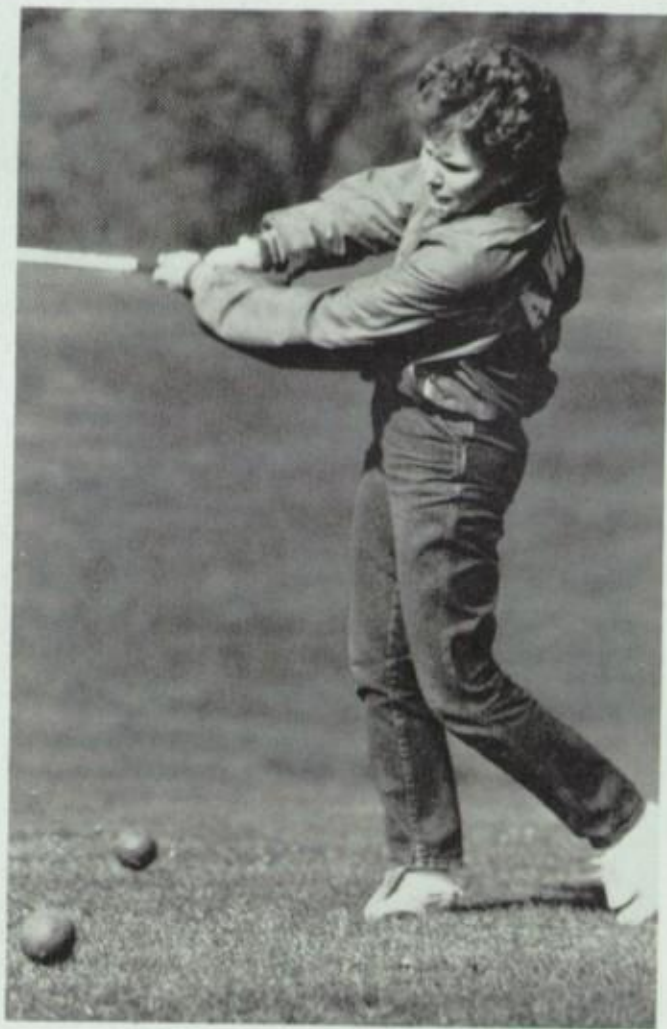

Albia's number one golfer was freshman Gina Della Vedova with a season low of 41 shot at Clarke. Elected to all-conference Gina finished fifth in conference and second in sectionals to advance to regionals where she carded a 104, good for a third-place tie behind medalist champion Cathy Corbin of Grinnell.

The team finished fourth in conference, second in the sectionals and advanced to regionals.

GIVING IT HER ALL, sophomore Brenda Wignall gives another effort on the shot put. Brenda missed competing in state by one half inch.

TIM MORGAN GOES FOR another person while running the mile in the Comet Relays. Tim became a second-year letterman and competed in the mile, 4x800 and 800.

A season of records and record-breaking

Recordbreaking was the theme for the boys and girls track teams. The boys 4x100 meter relay and the girls shot put records both surpassed and broke records of long standing.

The boys team began the year strong with 33 participating. Second-year coach Dave Bahr was pleased with the turnout and the possibilities made available through the athletes.

Three seniors that had never been out, Noland Johnson, Norman Stocker and Jeff Knupp, and a freshman, Scott Bettis, combined efforts to break a 25-year record in the 4x100 meter relay. They broke the record by more than one half second and qualified for state in the district track meet, but failed to advance past the preliminary heat.

They also earned the chance to run in the Drake Relays, defeating such teams as Des Moines Hoover.

Other relays such as the 4x200 and 4x400 vied for records as did the 4x800 which holds the oldest record at 32 years. The team, Knupp, Marc Jones, Tim Morgan and Kent Hulsey, was 13 seconds off the 1954 record.

To highlight the season, the whole team finished second in the Comet Relays with first place honors in the 4x800, 4x200, 4x100 and the triple jump. The Blue Demons scored 88 points, only 11 points behind first place. Athletes and coaches in the area commented on how much Albia improved from past performances.

The girls track team opened the season with an abundance of freshman and sophomores, with one sophomore, Brenda Wignall, setting a record in the shot put by exceeding 35 feet. Coach Pat Pendergrass stated that the girls team was strong in distance running with the sprinters not competing quite as well.

The competition was difficult, said Pendergrass, considering South Central Conference is one of the toughest in the state. Bahr agreed saying district teams were even more competitive.

According to Pendergrass the young team made competition more difficult, but if the girls keep working and practicing, competitiveness won't be too far away.

Aggression on the bases is key

The year held promise for new softball coach Randy Martin and baseball coach Jim Wynn.

"We're small but mighty" was junior Robyn Rogers' assessment of the softball team's talents.

Approximately two-hour practices officially began May 13 for the girls with pitchers and catchers beginning May 1 with morning practices being held from 8-10 a.m. when classes ended May 29.

The four seniors on the team, Carla Johnson, Sherry Hollinrake, Michelle Duer and Michelle Teno were according to Martin, the key for the Lady Dee's success.

Two eighth graders, Susan Wynn and Vicki Frey, joined the squad.

All-conference first-team player Sherry Hollinrake helped the 1985 squad win the conference championship. That season ended with a 19-10 record when Albia lost to Fairfield, 10-17, in sectional play.

Other all-conference picks were 1985 graduates Julie Yarkosky, Donna Flahive, Renae Jones and Terri Knowles.

The 1985 baseball squad ended the regular season by beating Chariton 12-7 but had its tournament season ended by the Chargers in the first round of district play at Center-ville 16-2.

Albia ended its season with a 9-16-1 overall mark and a 6-14-1 record in conference.

According to the 1986 coach Jim Wynn, aggression on the bases was the key for a successful season. Although the team had many returning lettermen, they were still young. The Blue Demons started practice May 13 with the first game opening the season May 28 at Pleasantville. The season ended in mid-July.

At the beginning of the summer, both coaches were unsure how well the teams would do throughout the season because of inconsistency. One night they might play great and the next not so well, explained Martin, but the potential was there for both teams to have a good season.

Everyone needs an

adjustment

Cheerleaders provide it at assemblies and pep rallies

As first-year cheerleading sponsor, Suzie Williams provided encouragement and respect for the ACHS cheerleaders and appreciated the cooperation given to her by them. As wife and mother, to two-year-old son, Tyler, Bobby Williams juggled home life with final steps to graduation from her school of four years, Buena Vista where she received her elementary teaching degree.

As 1986 college-graduate, Mrs. Williams had to go where there was work which explains the reason why she decided to leave ACHS after one year. "I enjoyed my year here and would like to stay another, but I can't limit myself to one small area!" said Mrs. Williams who plans to obtain a master's degree.

Under Mrs. Williams' leadership, the cheerleaders sponsored three contests during the Oct. 7 homecoming week. The pretty legs contest was won by senior Jay Leshen who received a razor and a can of shaving cream as a first-place prize.

Second place was awarded to senior Todd Robinson who also won a razor accompanied by a pair of panty hose.

Guessing the amount of candy pieces in a jar resulted in two winners. Junior Mike Curran and sophomore Tony Lahart both correctly guessed 574 pieces at Friday's, Oct. 11 pep assembly on the square. To break the tie, both Mike and Tony picked a number between 1 and 10 with Mike again guessing the correct number. He received a jar of candy as a prize.

In the last contest each class purchased a paper foot for 10 cents on which they could write their name, class or a note to a friend. The sophomores were the winning class with their feet numbering 100.

One exciting duty the cheerleaders have performed for the past several years has been to accompany ACHS stars to the state wrestling tournaments at Des Moines' Veterans Auditorium. Mrs. Williams said without cheerleaders at such events, there would be little team enthusiasm or crowd participation.

What Mrs. Williams will remember most about her year at ACHS are the reminders of how it was when she was on Albia's cheerleading squad for four years and made captain her junior and senior years. "It made me feel good to know the team was appreciated!"

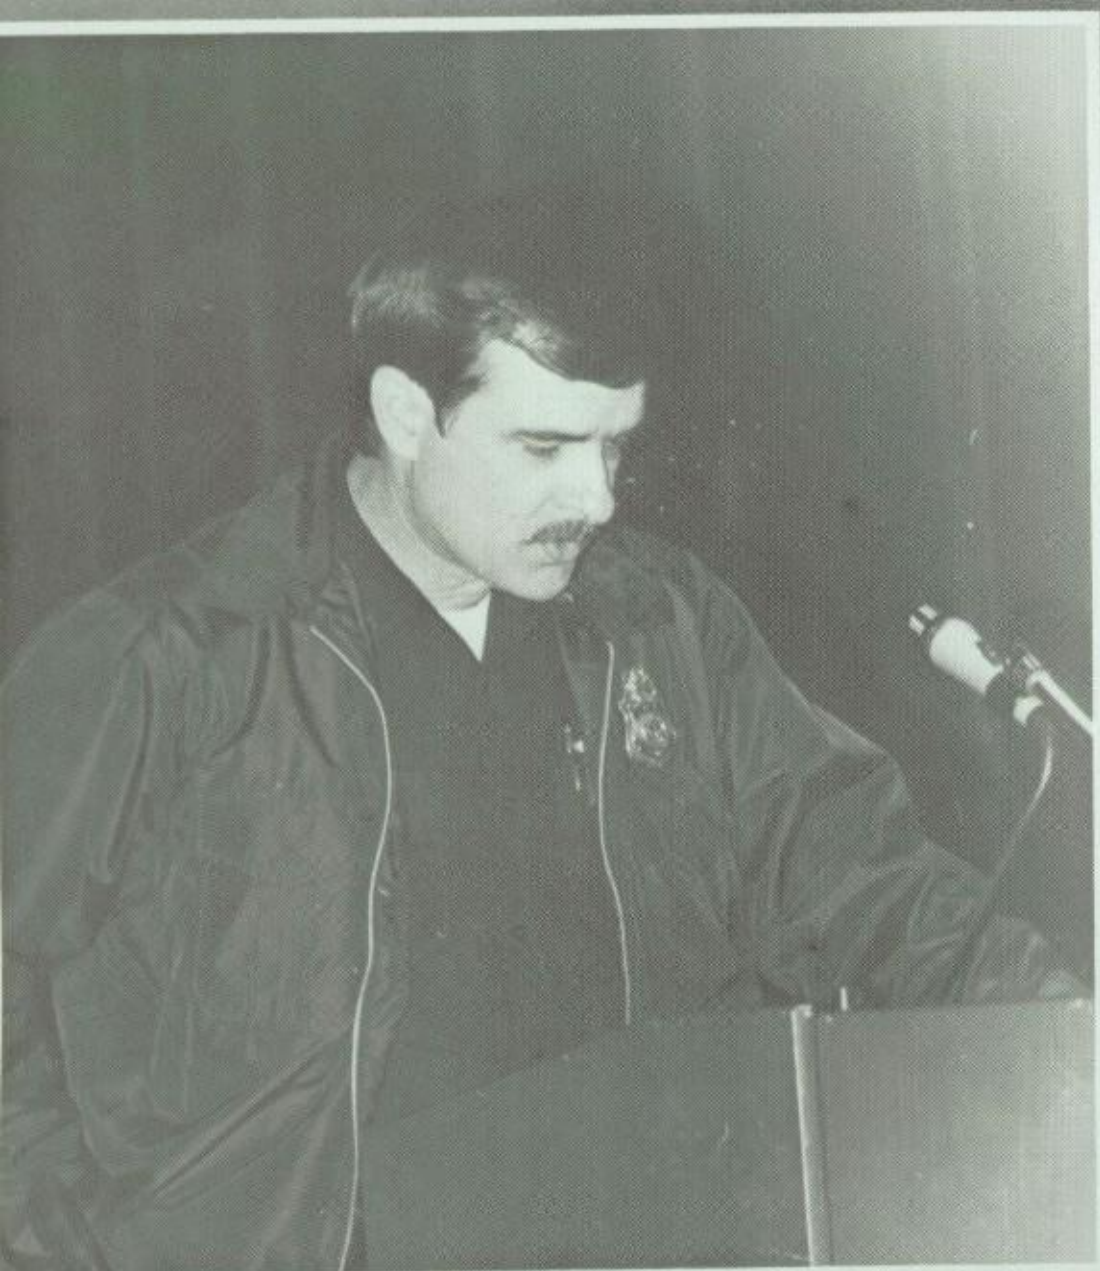

Everyone needs "an attitude adjustment" periodically, as the cheerleaders would say, and they provided it at games, pep rallies and assemblies throughout the year.

THANK YOU

Patty: To the greatest friend and sister anyone could ever ask for! Thanks for helping me with my problems and being there when I needed someone to talk to. I will always cherish our fun times together! Thank You!

Julie '87

THANK YOU

Mel, Andi, and Angie: To some really great friends! Thanks a lot for being so special! Someone that I tell my problems to and helps me bear work! Someone who cares (like after dances) and "waits for me!" Someone who will stay in a club with me! Thanks! Friends Always!

Julie '87

THANK YOU

To the '85-86 Yearbook Staff including Miss Stuchel: Good job on the yearbook! It was a lot of work, but it looks great! Thanks, Miss Stuchel, for putting up with all the hassles and questions!

Peggy, Julia, Dianne and Julie:
To some really great friends!
Thanks a lot for all the help in my junior year. In flags, in study hall and all those rides out to work.
But most of all, thanks for the friendship and just being there when I needed you! THANKS.
Friends always, Julie '87"

THANK YOU

Tab, Gina, and Angie: To some really great friends! Remember all the great times we had: "Homecoming," "Steph's birthday," and just staying over night at each others' houses.
But especially remember the fun
after school just bumming around and going up to "Kev's." I will never forget it! THANKS!
Friends always, Julie '87"

THANK YOU

To Rhonda, Kim, Mel, Carla, Sonja,
Jen, Jodi, Kerry, Annie, Sonja, Don-

Cramming

You've all experienced it — you know, the dreadful cramming before those dreadful semester tests.

Junior John Robnett begins the journey of studying for exams at 7 p.m., equipped and eager for the challenge.

12:15 a.m. finds John with his shirt off, the snacks piling up and the journey becoming tiresome.

7:30 a.m. Studying can no longer be done as John is overtaken by sleep and embarks upon a different kind of journey.

U.S. WARPLANE ATTACK LIBYA

MONDAY NIGHT, April 14, 1986 marked the date in which President Reagan directed the military to strike terrorist headquarters in Libya in retaliation for their unprovoked attacks against the United States.

Remains of Challenger's astronauts heading home

Thousands pay silent tribute

From The Register's Wire Services
CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA. — In seven flag-draped coffins, borne by a military honor guard, the space shuttle Challenger astronauts began their final journey home Tuesday.

Thousands of Kennedy Space Center workers, some of them in tears, paid silent tribute as a convoy of black hearses carried the coffins from a medical laboratory to a runway built for triumphal shuttle landings. From there, the coffins were flown to Delaware to be readied for burial.

Near the giant Vehicle Assembly Building, where shuttles are prepared for launch, NASA workers stood three and four deep as the convoy passed.

In a sense, the astronauts' journey began on Jan. 28 with the roar of rocket motors followed by an explosion 73 seconds later that doomed the Challenger crew, including New Hampshire teacher Christa McAuliffe.

On Tuesday, 13 weeks later, only the cry of sea gulls, the scuffling steps of an honor guard and the crisp commands of its leader broke the morning stillness as the caskets of the fallen astronauts were transferred, one by one, from the hearses to a camouflage-painted military cargo plane.

Tests show failure of seal was inevitable

WASHINGTON, D.C. — New and unpublished test results show that the failure of a safety seal on the space shuttle Challenger was virtually inevitable because of a combination of cold temperatures on the morning of the launch and serious design flaws.

The test, conducted for the presidential panel studying the accident, also determined that the joint would sometimes begin to fail at temperatures as high as 50 degrees Fahrenheit. In the past, officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have testified that they felt confident the shuttle could be launched at far lower temperatures without any undue risk to the crew.

The Challenger was launched Jan. 28 in 36-degree weather, but investigators estimate that the temperature of the joint that contained the failed seal was about 28 degrees, a temperature at which failure is more likely than not, the tests show.

The analysis of the accident, in which the seven crew members died, is expected to serve as the centerpiece of the presidential commission's report, due in early June. On Monday, panel members received a summary of the results, based on tests conducted

DO WORLD EVENTS affect everyone? Sophomore Jason Summers thinks so as he reads about the U.S. retaliatory attack on Libya in the school library during his study hall.

BUT DESPITE WORLD EVENTS. school life continues as Rick Kirk and head custodian Charlie Collins pour cement in front of the newly-built pressbox near the concession area.

The 1985-86 yearbook was completed by eight students who met in room 2 under adviser Victoria S. Stuchel during seventh period, 2:25 to 3:15 p.m.

First thing achieved was the theme of our yearbook. We chose Spectrum due to the fact that we're individuals coming into a classroom but become one by trying to accomplish the completion of a yearbook.

We looked up the definition of Spectrum and found out it was all the colors of the rainbow coming together. So we chose a burgundy embossed cover with a four-color picture of a rainbow to be placed in the center.

Within the cover is 10 pt. Korinna body copy and 8 pt. captains with all-capital, bold italic catchlines to compliment the pictures taken throughout the year. Headlines are 18 pt. to 60 pt. Also included are many graphic headlines and individual creativity to make the book complete.

To everyone who put up with "May I take your picture?" "May I use the copy machine?" "May I set up a time for an interview?" and "Will you fill out this information sheet?" we would like to thank you. We appreciate all of the cooperation and assistance in making our book a better one.

The Screech staff would also like to thank the Aibia NEWSpapers for many sports negatives, Sharon's Hometown Studio for taking underclass portraits, class pictures, senior assembly, graduation, group shots, and color pictures, and L and C photos for cheerleading and guidon groups.

A special thanks to the Echoes staff who lent us their ideas and came in to help us finish at the end of the year so we wouldn't be late on our deadlines.

To you, the yearbook staff would like to leave their thoughts and ideas of the 85-86 year.

Thank you,
Michelle Bunch
